THE DEAN'S WHISKERS

We notice in the last issue of "Old Oregon," the University magazine, three pictures of Dean Straub. In 1871 he had a dapper mustache. He was young then and his appearance indicated that he had about all the wisdom there was to obtain in this old world. Another picture shows him in 1887 with a crop of whiskers that would make an old bishop envious. The last picture was taken in 1922, with the dean's face shaven clean and he looks in that picture as young as he did in 1871.

All of which goes to show that whiskers no longer are to be tolerated. They even fail to produce that wise look which once was credited to them.

And now that William Allen White, the Kansas writer, has taken such a decisive stand against whiskers, we may look for everyone to follow Dean Straub's happy example of shaving off the beard as age creeps on, and thus holding his youthful appearance.

Dean Straub has another outstanding personal accomplishment—he wears a good-sized shoe for a man of his size. We happen to know this for a fact. One time the Dean and the writer were riding in the same Pullman car. During the night after everyone had retired, the engineer of that train became careless with his brakes and there was a scrambling of shoes in the Pullman. The next morning we put on Dean Straub's shoes through mistake. Of course we felt differently than we had ever felt before in our life—seemed to be raised to a higher level than the common people we had always associated with. And we could not understand that strange feeling until Dean Straub demanded his shoes and we were forced back into our normal place in life, when we reluctantly passed over the footgear to the old college man.

REVISE LAND VALUES

It is pleasant to know that at last land values in this county are going to be revised for loan purposes by at least one joint stock land bank.

Johnnie Montgomery, head of the Oregon-Washington institution, spent yesterday in this valley and immediately said something had been wrong with the values placed on lands for loans around here.

We who live here and actually know the valuation of lands from a production basis, have been chagrined and perplexed for some time over the exasperating values given by land banks.

When Jewett of the Spokane land bank was here recently, he promised to set matters right in his institution. Whether he has or not it is hard to ascertain, but now comes Johnnie Montgomery, who to our personal knowledge knows land when he sees it, for he followed the plow and looked a strong team of mules in the tail for many years in Umatilla county. No one can fool Johnnie Montgomery on land. He saw with his own eyes what ranch lands in this basin are doing, and he went away with a new thought in his mind relative to land values in Klamath county.

The visit of Mr. Montgomery to this county will mean a lot to the man who seeks a loan on a good piece of land, and the News is certainly pleased over the fact that he came himself and did not send an underling.

HOME PRODUCTS TO EAT

We have many kinds of home products, but after all there are times each day when all of us are interested in the home products to eat more than most any other kind.

Ladies of St. Paul's Episcopal Guild, realizing this fact, have announced a home products dinner at the church for Wednesday evening. Ordinarily a church dinner would not be mentioned editorially in the News, but the fact that the ladies are confining their entire dinner to Oregon products, and a great majority of the menu will be from Klamath basin, prompts us to take a hand in this laudable enterprise.

Few of us know what wonderful things we produce to eat right here at home, and in order to have that fastened firmly in our minds it will be necessary to attend this dinner where everything is Oregon-grown and Oregon-made, cooked by Oregon women, served by Oregon girls, and the proceeds of the entire undertaking will go to an Oregon church.

GOOD TIMES OR HARD TIMES?

What constitutes good times and what constitutes hard times?

This is a question that interests every man in business. It was answered the other day by Walter May, executive editor of the Portland Oregonian in a speech before a bunch of credit bureau managers of the Northwest. Editor May, who by the way, does not make utterances just to hear his voice reverberate, but always has facts and data to back up his statements, said that never since 1863 in the United States had business been more than 18 per cent below normal. He included the period of the terrible panic of 1893 and the lesser one of 1907. And on the other side of the ledger he showed that the most prosperous eras in this nation's history never went more than 20 per cent above normal.

There you have it—18 per cent below normal for panic times and 20 per cent above for the most prosperous times. And Editor May might have mentioned as a common plane that 10 per cent below normal makes business tight and 10 per cent above makes business excellent.

Thus, it will be seen by every business man that his need is to stimulate his business during the dull times, working every honorable method to push up the percentage so that it does not slump down to the 18 or even the 10 per cent that causes stagnant conditions.

The facts and figures given by Editor May are worth remembering, and they may act to the intelligent business man as quite a guide in handling his affairs to protect him when things show a little decline.

LETTER BOX

Route 1, Box 124 Klamath Falls, May 17, 1927.

Editor Klamath News, Dear Sir:

I am sure that I am not alone in my appreciation of your editorials and especially your Sunday, May 15, boost to tennis fans.

Tennis is one of the cleanest and best of all sports and there seem to be many fans in Klamath Falls. It really does not seem quite right that a city of twelve thousand people must depend upon a single tennis court to afford its recreation in that line, especially when our park board seems to have funds on which the interest for one year alone would provide us with ample play grounds.

Thanking you again in behalf of the many tennis fans of Klamath Falls for your interest, I am Very truly yours, TENNIS FAN.

DEATHS

NO RELIEF SEEN FOR FLOODED AREA

today, by Flood Relief Dictator John M. Parker.

The warning, issued by the former governor, requested all women and children, aged and infirm, to leave the parish, and directed residents of the area to prepare for removal of livestock.

So vast was the volume of water above the parish, the warning said, that the inevitable long duration of high stages makes the situation of Pointe Coupee critical.

Vast Area

The area contains 338,000 acres, and has a population of 24,697 people.

As a result of the sudden change in front on the part of the threatened area, which is 100 to 130 miles northwest of New Orleans, on the west side of the river, facilities have been seriously taxed. A trainload of boats and 25 men reached LaPayette last night, and a train was sent to Washington, La. from Monroe. Another trainload of craft was on the way from Beaumont, Texas.

In addition to the 500 persons who were taken out of the territory around Melville, Palmetto, Opelousas and Krotz Springs yesterday, rescue workers today began to evacuate all persons between Melville and Simmsport.

Conditions Grow Worse

Conditions at Melville were reported to be growing steadily worse. The water was said to have risen six to 12 inches last night, and the depth in the town is now 15 to 20 feet. The town marshal has given orders that all livestock on the dike be killed, presumably to eliminate the danger of levee sloughing.

Two deaths were reported last night, one at Port Barre, where a negro boy died from exposure, and the other at Opelousas, where a baby was reported to have died from infantile paralysis.

CREW OF FREIGHTER IS BEING RESCUED

Federal Telegraph company here by radio from the tanker Marcus H. Whittier, in the vicinity of Eureka.

First word of the distressed freighter reached this city late Thursday, when it was reported that the boat with her crew of 25 men was pounding to pieces on the rocky ledge near Eureka. For hours, as tiny togs battled the waves to reach the stricken vessel, it appeared that the crew was doomed along with the ship.

Radio messages flashed across the waters, advising that the men could not possibly be saved without shore aid. Huge breakers made impossible the launching of light boats, and the Indiana Harbor was in water too shallow to permit larger boats to go to the rescue.

Abatement of the huge waves for a few hours Friday made it possible for coast guardmen to get their speedy boats in position to string a breeches buoy to the doomed ship.

The steamer was heading for Portland with a San Francisco cargo, when she went around, Captain A. Anderson of Oakland, is in command of the ship. It was not considered likely tonight that the cargo, or even the ship, would be saved. All efforts were devoted to saving the crew and by the time the men are off it is expected that the boat will have pounded into a mass of wreckage.

HELD EIGHT ACES IN ONE HAND—TOO MUCH

NEW YORK, May 20, (AP)—A man who can draw eight aces in a pinocle game deserves the best funeral possible, in the opinion of Irving Kempf. He is going to give such a funeral to Frank Frankenthal, his employe, who dropped dead when he got the remarkable hand.

MONEY IN THE PAINT BUSINESS, LOOKS LIKE

NEW YORK, May 20, (AP)—Having been in the paint business since graduation from Princeton nine years ago, and made some money, Wm. H. Bado is to be a financier. He has just paid $217,000 for a seat on the stock exchange, a new high record.

MEDFORD, Ore., May 20, (A.P.)

The second annual district convention of the Lions of Oregon convened this morning at the Woodmen's Hall. The morning was devoted to the routine business and report of committees. At the afternoon session the chief business will be the election of a district governor and the selection of a convention city for 1928.

John H. Carlin of this city, speaker of the last legislative session is mentioned for the district governorship, and Salem is making an active drive for the convention.
