Indignant Ashland Crowd Hange Three Killers in Effigy

MEDFORD, Ore., June 2. (AP)—Indignant over the compromise which allowed the De Autremont twins to escape the noose by confessing to the murder of four Southern Pacific trainmen in the Siskiyou mountains October 11, 1923, a crowd of Ashland citizens estimated at several hundred, early this morning hung three dummies to the Chamber of Commerce sign over Main Street of that city, each labeled with the name of one of the three De Autremonts—Hugh, Ray and Roy. Coyle Johnson, the brakeman for whose murder Hugh De Autremont was convicted, was a well known resident of Ashland, and feeling against the De Autremonts has been strong ever since the tragedy. The dummies were taken down late this morning by the Ashland police.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif., June 21. Antimony and Gorman Station.
