

Priest Tells of Missing Aviators

NEW YORK, June 30, (AP)—Dr. Thomas H. Cusack, surgeon, of Brooklyn, today made public a letter from a priest in the parish of Morveen, Ireland, which Dr. Cusack believes throws light on the fate of the French flyers—Nungesser and Goll.

The letter was written on May 26 last, by the Rev. Father Patrick Madden, who in news dispatches at the time was described as the last person to see the fliers as they passed over Ireland.

Father Madden's letter described a fight between two hawks and a carrier pigeon, which is thought to have been released by the aviators when they realized their plane was not properly functioning.

"You may not have heard that the aviators released a pigeon," said the letter. "It came in over Morveen and then two hawks attacked it and brought it down. Some young lads witnessed the fight, and rushing up captured the dying pigeon. The message must have been destroyed or lost in the attack, but the rings and rubber for securing messages still were on the bird.

"My reading of the affair is that the aviators hovered over Tarbert, thinking to come down. They chanced a further flight then, and when about 200 miles out they decided to return. They doubtless were going very bad then, so they released the pigeon, which got back here about two hours after they left.

"Making back to Ireland they fell into the sea about 75 miles off Loop Head. No search was made around here, while valuable time was lost searching the channel and your side. It is all too bad."

AMERICA REACHES PARIS; CAN'T LAND

the plane or nothing to indicate that it had landed there.

False Reports With confirmation of the reports that Byrd had landed at Isay Les Mouligneux lacking, officials and spectators at the field grew pessimistic over Byrd's fate. It was feared he might have landed at some obscure place.

The Le Bourget wireless station had received no wireless signals from the plane since 1:20 a. m. (8:20 a. m. E. D. T.) and the Havre station had last reported hearing from the plane at 1:40 a. m.

All on Lookout At five a. m. today (midnight E. D. T.) the commander of the airbase at Le Mourget told the United Press that his information indicated Byrd had not yet landed anywhere near Paris. If he had landed, the commander said, he must have come down some distance from Paris. All French airmen have been instructed to remain alert for the America.

Crossing Paris in taxicabs toward the Isay Les Mouligneux flying field, United Press correspondents proved that rumors of a landing there were false. The field was not lighted and it was found that it had been abandoned as an aeronautical landing field a year ago.

The custodian declared that no plane had landed there in recent months except those which were undergoing tests at a nearby factory.

Compass Won't Work LE BOURGET FIELD, July 1, (Friday, U.P.)—A special United Press wireless caught the following message from Byrd:

"We are flying around with a bad compass and cannot find the airbase or landing ground."

The message was somewhat garbled. Officials of the field here believed the report from Versailles may possibly be true. Ten minutes after midnight Le Bourget had received a wireless message from Byrd saying, "I am flying around west of Paris. I do not know whether I shall land near Paris or elsewhere."

The message concluded with the America's call signs "WTW." It is thought probable that Byrd became definitely lost and was forced down near Versailles.

Rambouillet is one of the show places of France and is familiar to thousands of American tourists. The little town is 19 miles southwest of Versailles.

Holding Ambulance ROOSEVELT FIELD, Long Island, June 30, (U.P.)—A cablegram from Professor Herbert Adam Gibbons, Paris representative of the American Trans-oceanic company, said that at 6:30 a. m. Paris time, no word had been received from the America and that automobiles and an airplane ambulance were held in readiness for an emergency at Le Bourget.

BIG SURPLUS SHOWN

WASHINGTON, June 30, (AP)—The government closed its books tonight at the end of the fiscal year with a paper surplus of more than $600,000,000, the largest in the country's history.

Most of this surplus already had been turned in to cut down the standing debt.

scriptions or both. When enough subscriptions are in hand to total $20 it constitutes a club. It is not necessary to turn in the $20 worth all at one time. Every new subscription turned in until July 25 will count. After the offer closes the campaign department will mail a special ballot to cover the extra votes earned.

This special offer provides a splendid opportunity for new candidates to enter the race. The nomination blank starts an entrant out with 12,000 free votes and the first subscription is worth 20,000 additional free votes and whatever regular votes it earns. The nomination blank appears on another page of this paper, together with full details of this big 100,000 extra-vote offer.
