

Bond House May Probe Drowning

GRANTS PASS, Ore., Aug. 8. (P.)—Doubt has been cast on drowning of Roy E. Johnson at Hell gate on Rogue River by discovery of a considerable shortage in his accounts as manager of the Grants Pass plant of the Southern Oregon Gas Company, according to W. H. George, general manager of the company, who has been investigating the books of the company here. Johnson was supposed to have been drowned while fishing on the lower river on July 25, but a continued search has resulted only in the finding of his hat and fishing pole. His fishing companion did not see him fall in the river.

According to the statement made by Mr. George, Johnson knew that an investigation of his accounts was under way and that the matter was to come to an issue the week he disappeared.

Suicide.
"From evidence and from stories which have come to us since his disappearance, it is my belief that Roy Johnson was not drowned," asserted Mr. George. "If he were drowned, it is my belief that it was a case of suicide."
The matter has been turned over to the bonding company which had bonded Johnson. Mr. George has not indicated what further action may be taken.

Johnson went fishing near Hell Gate on the evening of July 25 with one companion. The companion left the river to change his shoes, but Johnson remained behind to "try a spinner." That was the last seen of him. As Johnson could not swim, the disappearance was reported as an accidental drowning and men have been on the river night and day ever since looking for the body.

Search Unavailing.
Dynamite was used in an effort to bring the body to the surface and the driver was dragged with no success. A committee, composed of one representative of each organization here with which Johnson was affiliated, has been in charge of the searching operations. The committee has not decided yet if the search in the river shall continue.

WHEN IT CAME TO MIXING CONCRETE, THE GERMANS WERE CHAMPS.

One of the entrances to a German hospital, tunneled under "Cornwills Hill" east of the Meuse.

Anyways, those war-time Germans were good concrete-mixers. And how they did those concrete! All along the Hindenburg line, the Kriehilde Stellung and the Freya Stellung were hundreds of pill boxes, machine gun nests and shelters—and many of these sturdy monuments are standing today where the members of the American Legion may see them on their visit to France in September.

Up along the Chemin des Dames there's a huge abutment, and except for a few pockmarks of bullets, it is as staunch as it was built in 1915. The dugout

The Forward Look

TOMORROW'S telephone requirements must be foreseen today; the service of the future must be provided for in the present.

In the America of tomorrow new industries will develop, trade will increase, residential sections will replace the vacant areas of today. There must be new telephone buildings and switchboards; millions of miles of new wire and cable; yet a larger army of men and women to build and operate the ever increasing facilities; more and more trained executives to manage and direct.

It costs about $35,000,000 a year to keep ahead of America's demand for telephone service. If this vast sum is to be spent wisely and efficiently, future demands must be forecasted with as much precision as is humanly possible so that materials, money, manpower will not be lacking when the need comes. Only through the forward look is the telephone kept ready to meet the growing demands of a growing nation.
