AVIATORS SPURED TO MAKE BIG HOP

And McDonough Costes, with his biplane, also waited only for good weather.

All three when they went to bed early this evening, left early calls for Wednesday morning. It is believed possible that French planes may take a southern Atlantic course, somewhat north of the Azores Islands, if bad weather over the popular northern course persists.

Levine's selection of the Cranwell field far north of Croydon, is taken to indicate that he at least has decided definitely to take the northern course if any.

In an interview before he left for Croydon, Levine said he intended to try to regain the endurance flight record with his Columbia monoplane after the Trans-Atlantic flight.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 30, (A. P.)—Bad weather conditions over the eastern Atlantic are likely to hold the Royal Windsor at her field at Walkerville for another twenty-four hours.

Sir Frederick Stuart, Toronto weather observer, in a telephone conversation with Justus Miller, secretary of the local flight committee, advised further delay for the start for England of "the Windsor to Windsor flight."

ROOSEVELT FIELD, New York, Aug. 30, (AP)—An adverse wind caused another postponement late today in the projected flight of the monoplane "Old Glory" to Rome.

called for the most popular man to be determined by the number of ladies he had escorted to the dance. He found that Nick Blanas of the Arcade hotel had with him 57 ladies, and immediately Hammond pronounced him the wonder man of Klamath Falls. Then it was discovered that Jack Hirschberger had 54 with him. J. Hansen showed some speed, for he had 37, Harry Wilson had 31, Bert Willis was escort to 31, Joe Sloey had 25, R. Smithers had 24, and George Down had 18.

The fair association heard was extremely well pleased with the opening event in the new pavilion, and each member promised that the new structure should become a central social center in the future.

The members of the fair board feel that much credit is due the concerns which rushed the fine structure to completion. The W. D. Miller Construction company, which held the contract, rushed the building through to completion in about 30 days, while Garcelon's shop completed attractive wiring arrangements in record time. Howard R. Perrin, local architect, designed the handsome building.

friendly overtures on the part of rooming house attaches, it was said.

Identification Tag Sole identification, aside from the name which Clifford gave on the hotel register when he arrived in Lakeview, was an army identification tag bearing the number 1,645,616. From his scanty personal effects, officers could learn nothing.

The theory was advanced that the ex-soldier, despondent over matters about which those around him knew nothing and possibly in low spirits over probable inability to find work, took suicide as a means of terminating his troubles. Whether a coroner's inquest will be held today could not be learned.

Corvallis To Get Reclamation Meet

PORTLAND, Aug. 30, (U. P.)—A call was issued today to the trustees of the Oregon Reclamation congress to meet in special session at Corvallis September 10.

The regular annual convocation of the congress will be held in Prineville from October 14 to 16, and according to plans now being formulated, will be devoted to a proposed federal reclamation policy in Oregon.

The Corvallis gathering will be a preliminary effort in behalf of questions and policies to be considered at Prineville. In the light of the recent visit of Oregon irrigation and reclamation projects by the irrigation and reclamation committee of the house of representatives, the call for the special meeting at Corvallis was considered as significant.

It is generally understood among Oregonians interested in reclamation affairs that the Corvallis meeting will be to lay the groundwork for a program calling for presentation of bills in congress authorizing federal action in behalf of Oregon's projects, notably the Deschutes and Umatilla Rapids.

Klamath Falls labor fete and fall fair festival, long declared, and together with new concessions and feature offer unparalleled entertainment.

A big feature of the celebration carnival this year will be the Slippery Gulch which promises to rival the famous Happy Canyon of the Pendleton round-up. Slippery Gulch is a portrayal of the old west in gala costume and holiday mein, with fun for everybody and stacks of paper money for the occasion.

Big Parade As the celebration approaches a climax on Labor Day, Monday, the huge parade will straighten out down Main street for the delight of celebration throngs.

Starting promptly at 10 a. m. Monday, the parade will commence at Spring and Main, proceed down Oak to Sixth, up Sixth to Klamath avenue, west on Klamath to Second, from Second to Main and back down Main street to Broad.

A number of attractive floats have already been entered in the parade by various local organizations and business houses, and combined with the rodeo parade the line of march will be the most interesting and largest ever staged in this city, Long asserted.

The rodeo parade will be held Saturday, but will assemble again Monday for the big labor celebration march. With the labor unions, fair board and rodeo association cooperating in every way to put the four days over successfully, visitors will get the best entertainment possible, Long said.

Federal Revenue Hits High Mark

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30, (U. P.)—Internal revenue collections from all classes of federal taxes during the fiscal year ending June 30 last, were nearly $20,000,000 above those of the previous fiscal year when many higher rates were in effect. Income tax collections went up $245,000,000. This was offset by a loss of $150,000,000 in miscellaneous taxes.

This news, announced by David H. Blak, commissioner of internal revenue, brought cheer to Senators and congressmen who have been sharpening their knives for another sizable tax cut before they go back to the voters for re-election next year. Recently there has been some uneasiness in congressional circles because of pessimistic warnings from administration quarters. It had been said that tax reduction this year should not go beyond $150,000,000, but Chairman Green of the ways and means committee said a few days ago he had reason to believe this figure could not safely be exceeded. Apparently he had been to the treasury department and had seen the new figures for last year's tax collections.
