ON THE FARM

Down deep in the heart of every man who is built right there is a keen desire to own land, to work land, to make land produce. Men who are located in regions where the land is poor are under a handicap. Men who live in cities must be content with the golf course as a place to get their feet on the ground—but—

The man who lives in Klamath Falls has a chance to be interested in land. He has a chance to own a farm and operate it.

The Harvest Tour yesterday saw acres and acres of good land waiting for the plow, waiting for the man with sense to make it productive.

It is a great thing to live in a country where the land—the good land—is not all taken up by people who will neither sell nor part with it. Here there is a chance for the man who wants to farm in any manner, who wants to raise anything, to take a hand.

There is a lot to be done in agriculture in Klamath county—but it will be done, for farming here is a dividend paying proposition.

Let every man in the city realize what a great asset the farming section is. Those who went in the caravan yesterday can see now, if they did not before, that this is the big industry to encourage and look after. Other industries get along, but there is positively a great opportunity on the land in this country.

VOGUE OF THE BEAUTIFUL

For fifty years the United States has concentrated its efforts on the practical. In other words, we have tended strictly to business without thought of art and other higher forms of culture. It has seemed our duty to build first and decorate after. Have we at last awakened to a need and hunger for the beautiful?

That Americans are gradually refining their traditional commercialism is obvious to the least observant. Even the little red school house has a new dress of a less harsh color. De luxe editions of classical and modern literature have found a new market here. The opera, symphony orchestras, art exhibitions, the drama and the other higher forms of art and culture have become an integral part of American life.

Until recently American made automobiles excelled the European in mechanical perfection, production and low price, but could not compare with the European in beauty of design and body refinements. It was the old story of European culture and American utility. European roads have long been bordered by stately rows of trees and hedges. America's road building program is still in its incipency and little thought has been given to the decorative element until recently. American highways will some day traverse aisles of shade trees and green hedges.

AL SMITH AND HIS CHANCES

Among the democrats Governor Smith of New York is undoubtedly the leading presidential candidate. Mr. McAdoo seems to have gone into complete retirement. Governor Ritchie of Maryland, gentleman dabbler in politics, goes his amiable and rather futile way. Senator "Jim" Reed, seemingly growing a little weary of the game, clings on in the hope of inheriting the Smith strength in a convention deadlock.

The New Yorker is an active, alert and resourceful campaigner, a two-fisted fighting man who loves the smell of political powder. Given a united and fighting party, Governor Smith could be a dangerous contender. There, however, is the rub.

If the democratic party must be united to stand it is bound to fall. The wounds of 1924 have never healed, merest mention of Smith or McAdoo starting them to bleeding afresh. Prohibition and religious belief have broken it beyond repair.

Should Governor Smith win the democratic nomination—stranger things have happened—his fight would just be beginning. To be elected he must induce Bryanism to swallow Tammanyism and persuade the democratic donkey to wear the pelt of the Tammany tiger. He must weld the Turpentine Belt and the cotton patches of the dry South and the short-grass Bryanism of the bone-dry West to the wringing-wet East. After accomplishing these tasks, which make the twelve labors of Hercules must mobilize the republic into insignificance, he can wets and the Middle West corn and wheat belts behind his candidacy to win.

A machine represented to be certain in the diagnosis of disease has been tested and found to have altogether too many incurable ailments.

Little Robert Reed, who wouldn't put tobacco in his mouth, may be the father of the modern cigaret holder.

Giving every man a jog is recommended as a cure for unrest. Still, many are willing to take the money without the job.

NATIONAL CHAMPION STAGING COMEBACK

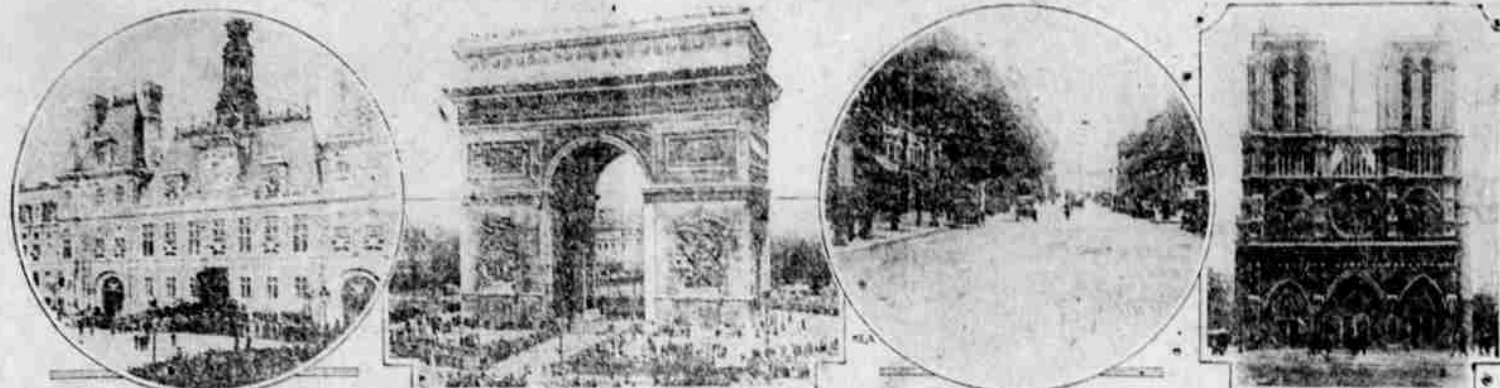

CHERRY VALLEY CLUB, GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 21. (UP)—Glenna Collett, women national golf champion in 1922 was eliminated in the second round of the national tournament here today by Mrs. Elexa Stirling Frazer, national champion in 1916-1920.

Masterful iron play by Mrs. Frazer gave her a 2 and 1 victory in the 18-hole. Miss Collett predicted to recapture her title, lost mainly because of her putting.

Mrs. Frazer meets Mmie. Simone de la Chaume of France in the third round and the match is expected to produce one of the finalists. Mmie. de la Chaume today defeated Mrs. H. G. Higbee of Detroit, one up.

WHERE THE LEGION MARCHE D THROUGH PARIS STREETS

The ranks of the American Legion swung past these historic places in Paris in the September parade. To the left they passed the Hotel de Ville (city hall), then through the Arc de Triomphe, next along the Rue Royal from the Madeleine into the Place la Concorde, then to Notre Dame, where the parade disbanded.

Jocular Poem
The collic to the greyhound said:
"I would be some joke, my brother,
If cops quit shooting at us dogs,
To shoot at one another."

Another way to exterminate our wild life is to do a little spanking.
"As I was sitting in the crowded street coming home tonight," said Warner, at the dinner table, "a woman entered and stood almost exactly in front of me."
"And you got up and gave her your seat?" queried his wife.
"No," replied Warner, "another fellow got ahead of me. But I had to wait five minutes for him."

Heepee husband: "Where is your mistress going for the winter?"
Maid: "To Palm Beach, sir."
H. H.: "Do you know whether she is taking me with her?"

Did you ever get any cheerful news out of one of those envelopes with a sun parlor in front? Neither did we.

It is said a German, a Frenchman and a Russian made a bet as to which of them could stay the longest in a goat stable. They all entered the stable at midnight; after 15 minutes the German came out, 10 minutes later the Frenchman appeared. At 1 o'clock the goat left the stable.

October
October is a daring sprite,
A winsome little maid,
Brown-eyed, laughing, temperamental,
Hair of russet shade,
Just can't blame Jack Frost for stealing
My best flowers to give her;
Anybody'd like to please
Dear little maid, October,
Times she'll start the day a-singin'
Breezy, mellow song,
Makes you want to leave your work,
And hike along.
Sometimes, too, she takes to sighin'
Makes you feel so blue;
Shakes the leaves from out her garments,
Skies are frowning, too.
Wouldn't want to change her temper
To a sunny spile;
Why, even mortals aren't happy
All the while.
Never know just what she will do
Dance or sing or cry;
Still I love the bright October,
Why shouldn't I?

Aggrieved Customer: "That can of corn I bought here exploded with a loud noise."
Quick-witted Grocer: "I'm very sorry, madam. One of my careless employes evidently sold you pop corn."

Sandy was walking along the street in Detroit with a pair of trousers hanging over his arm. Someone asked him who he was working for—he replied the Detroit Free Press.

Danquet: Some cold vituals on a plate; somebody you don't know introducing a speaker you don't care to hear.

At 12:30, "There goes the last car."
"Oh, that's all right, if I kiss you goodnight, I can just make the 5:15 in the morning."

Love may be blind, but the average mother-in-law is an eye opener.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?
By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma

That the wide-awake business man never hesitates.
That he knows those who hesitate never arrive.
That he knows the business that hesitates is often lost.
That business men must be up and doing all the time.
That they must be constantly originating new ideas and advertising plans and put them into effect.
That the right advertising at the right time increases business.
That good ideas increase business. They do not hunt the business men, but the business men have to think them up themselves.
That many varieties of ideas are handed every business man, but the success of ideas depends on the decision of the business man.
That the man who succeeds is not the man who waits for business, but the man who makes up his mind to succeed and then goes ahead and does it.
The better a business serves the public the better business they will have.

Albert Kay directed the production with a cast which included Mary Brian, Charles "Bud" Rogers, E. J. Ratcliffe, Otto Hoffman, Albert Gran and "Char" Heine" Conklin.

At the Liberty

"More Pay—Less Work," which will show at the Liberty theatre tomorrow is Peter B. Kyne's latest story about Cappy Hicks. Kyne has outdone all his former efforts in creating amusing situations for Cappy and his associates and in this comedy he has almost all the principal actors floundering around in San Francisco Bay at some time during the act.
First Cappy's daughter Betty falls into the water. Willie Hinchfield, son of Dad Hinchfield, Cappy's old enemy, dives in after her. Later in the comedy Cappy and Dad are spilled into the water when a motorboat overturns.
A double knockout that finishes a flat fight is another amusing incident. Tux collide in the bay and the captains start fighting. Each lands a haymaker

LETTER GOLF

Table with 10 columns and 10 rows. The word 'FARM' is written in the first row, and 'CITY' is written in the last row. The rest of the cells are empty.

THE RULES
1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW TO HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2—You can change only one letter at a time.
3—You must have a complete word of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4—The order of letters cannot be changed.
The solution is printed on page 8.
