

Budd Says Merger Plan Is Big Step For Lower Rates

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 2. (UP)—Unification of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways would immediately decrease by $10,000,000 the present deficiency in the earnings of the railways of the western region and bring the day of lower rates that much nearer, Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, declared here today.

"Private interest rather than public interest is behind the opposition to unification," Budd charged in an address to business men of the city. "This interest is placing the immediate advantage of a very few localized interests ahead of the general welfare of the whole northwest."

The executive emphasized the fact that the interest of the public in the unification is not something apart from the interest of the railways concerned.

"The great Northern is glad to invite a comparison between what it has done and is doing to further the development of the northwest, with the record of any of the critics of unification who assume to speak in behalf of public interest," Budd continued.

"The prosperity of the railways depend upon bringing new industries into the northwest, on developing its resources, increasing its population and thereby affording a market for agricultural products. These railways need to increase the volume of their traffic in order to put their earnings on a par with the earnings of railways in other sections of the country."

Trusted Guard Implicated In Prison Revolt

FOLSOM, Calif., Dec. 2. (UP)—That a trusted guard who was dismissed last February and whose name officials refused to reveal, was implicated in a jail-break plot previous to the Thanksgiving Day riots, was revealed today by C. A. Larkin, captain of the guard at Folsom prison.

The plot came to light with the discovery of two pistols in a cell, following the interception of a note from a convict to the discharged guard. The note, Larkin said, told of a plan by which the guard was to smuggle arms into the prison.

The six convicts who are accused of being the ringleaders of the Thanksgiving Day uprising, were allowed to confer with their attorneys today. The attorneys, T. A. Farrell and Clifford Russell, who were requested by the convicts to take over their defense, declined to take the case, stating that Guard Ray Singleton slain in the riot, was a personal friend of theirs.

Rupert Hughes Has Come-Back For His Critic

CHICAGO, Dec. 2. (UP)—If, as Charles G. Miller, New York journalist, asserted during the McAndrew school trial, Rupert Hughes, the writer, in his history of George Washington is a "woodpecker looking for maggots," that replied Hughes "may explain my interest in Mr. Miller."

Hughes answered Miller's criticism in a telegram to the Chicago Daily News today.

"If my biography is the first to treat the entire life of Washington with frankness and respect," Hughes telegraphed, "it is because others have not hesitated to suppress the writings of that very great and very noble gentleman, who was no prig, who loved the truth about himself so well that he recorded it fully."

The first president's home became a tavern, as he himself described him, Hughes said, because of the "magnificent hospitality" of the man. In quoting Washington's activities from the general's own writings, Hughes declared "I rejoice that so brave a soldier, so pure a patriot could also have been wise enough to enjoy the good things of life, including even the wines in which he indulged, with temperance and grace."

Countless thousands swarmed through showrooms throughout the United States and in London for their first look at the new Ford automobile.

Sales Heavy

By nightfall dealers were announcing sales had been far greater than they had anticipated. One firm in New York said orders were being taken at the rate of 15 a minute. Fifteen thousand persons had made down payments to bind their purchase.

Similar reports came from Detroit, the home of the Ford, from Chicago, London, Cleveland, Kansas City, San Francisco, Denver, Atlanta, Washington and Boston.

Wild scenes were enacted in many cities when the crowds became so large that police had to be called to keep them in line. It was as though a great part of the population had turned out to insist they be allowed to contribute to the fortune of the wizard of the automobile industry.
