Money Interests City Which Has G.O.P. Conclave

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 22. (UP)—While Kansas City republicans appreciate the honor to be had from entertaining the republican national convention June 12, 1928, they have not completely overlooked the monetary value of the gathering.

A statement by Arthur Hardgrave, president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, indicated information he received in the east led him to believe actual money left in the city as a result of the convention will total more than $2,999,999. No estimate, he said, could be made of the publicity value to be had from this national gathering.

Hardgrave was visibly proud of the achievement of Kansas City representatives in getting the meeting for the mid-west city.

"We got the convention by going after it like gentlemen, fighting night and day, tooth and nail, but at all times like gentlemen," he said.

"That is the spirit we want to use in taking care of the convention now that we have it," he added, in warning all city officials to use diplomacy when making statements regarding the convention that might be misinterpreted by other cities.

The housing problem coincidental with a national political convention was recognized by Hardgrave as one demanding strict attention.

Every politician in Kansas City, Hardgrave said, will exert himself to assure comfortable lodgings for delegates while here.

"We've got it now," he said, "and we've got to put it over in grand style. If necessary, every hotel in the city must be emptied to make room for the visitors."

Nations Turning To Arbitration In Settling Trouble

GENEVA, Dec. 22. (UP)—Arbitration and conciliation are tending rapidly to oustrip war as the recognized means of settling international disputes.

Statistics just completed by the treaty registering department of the League of Nations show that there are now 220 treaties in force which contain provisions for settling all disputes arising under them by arbitration.

The great bulk of these have been negotiated since the organization of the League and under the impetus of the arbitration movement which the league has launched. During the past year alone 40 such treaties, nearly all between European nations, were registered with the league.

Up to the present time 18 different nations also have accepted the compulsory jurisdiction clause of the league's permanent court of international justice of the Hague. Under this clause the signatory nations accept the compulsory jurisdiction of the court for the settlement of all judicial disputes which may arise with other nations accepting the clause.

"Electricity!— The Master of Mass Production"

Says Dr. Henry Mace Payne Consulting Engineer, American Mining Congress

"America's prosperity is the fruit of intelligent power development, with skilled direction and mass production, paying the highest wages in the world, her workmen enjoying a higher standard of living than ever before. Wherever we look about us we find the evidences of the co-partnership between brains and business."*

ELECTRIC power may rightfully be regarded as one of the world's basic industries. It is mankind's most tireless and efficient servant.

By means of its magic current, forces are unleashed that free labor from excessive burden; homes are made happier and more comfortable, and the wealth of the nation multiplied many times over.

The wealth is that not taken from others by trade, but new wealth, wrung from the treasure house of science, enhancing individual production capacity forty fold and increasing wages proportionately.

It is obvious, therefore, that the well-being of everyone depends upon the accessibility and abundance of electric power.

Through the foresight, initiative and commercial daring of the electric power companies of this country, American industry today is supplied with more power than all the rest of the world combined—twenty-four times more power than was available twenty-four years ago—and at a cost less than the pre-war price.

To the degree that the principle of individual initiative, under which these companies have functioned is maintained, will the continued prosperity of the nation as a whole be assured.
