HIGHWAY

By Ralph Emerson Hackett

All day the motors droning past
In merry wanderlust
Sing one familiar song to me,
Then vanish in the dust.

"A road that takes you round the world
Is handy by your door.
You'll find it smooth for many miles,
And rough for many more.

"The road is old and you are young;
Come out and choose your star!
Each mossy milestone left behind
Will prove the man you are."

All night the cars go droning past
In conquest of the dawn.
I will not hear their chant again—
To-morrow I'll be gone—

Here and There

Friends of Mrs. J. C. Johnston of this city, who left some time ago with her daughter, Miss Anna Mae Johnston, to spend the summer months at Long Beach, Calif., will be pleased to learn her health is greatly improved since she has been in the southern state.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Wilson, who are now making their home in San Francisco, spent Friday and Saturday in Klamath Falls with friends. This is the first visit which Mrs. Wilson has made to this city since leaving here about 12 years ago, although Mr. Wilson has returned several times. Mr. Wilson was formerly in charge of the Swift Packing Co. here, and they have many friends who welcomed their return to the city.

Many will be interested to learn that Mrs. Celia DuFaut was in the city for a few days this past week from her home in Los Angeles. Mrs. DuFaut is an old-timer here, having made this city her home for many years.

A young man who is soon to leave here to study for the ministry will preach his first sermon at the First Christian church this morning. He is Ren Hollister, who is well known in Klamath Falls. Hollister will also preach the sermon again this evening. He is filling the pulpit in the absence of Rev. V. K. Allison, who is enjoying a fortnight's vacation.

Many remarks are heard upon the cool, restful setting of the city library, which sets back from the hot street, surrounded by tall trees and green lawns, and with the wide windows of the library open to the breeze for the comfort of those within. In fact it is a delightful place to while away a hot summer afternoon.

J. H. Fuller of Ashland, connected with the Ashland summer art school, is a visitor in the city. Two men and two women compose the staff in this department, including Miss Belle Cady White, well-known artist and teacher. Students have entered for the summer session from all over the northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Jones have arrived here from California to make Klamath Falls their future home. Mrs. Jones will be remembered as Miss Constance Schallack, who made this city her home for many years. She is the daughter of Fred Schallack. Already a number of delightful social affairs have been given in courtesy to Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

VISITORS HONORED BY LOVELY TEA

The attractive home of Mrs. Fred Schallack was the setting for a delightful tea and reception on Wednesday afternoon between the hours of four and six o'clock when Eulonia chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution honored Mrs. E. C. Apperson, state regent of McMinnville, French bouquets of pastel shaded summer blossoms field in beautiful baskets adorned the rooms of the Schallack home. In the dining room the color scheme was carried out in pink, lavender and green.

At the perfectly appointed tea table, where the silver service was used, Mrs. Charles Wood Eberlein presided. Mrs. D. V. Kuykendall, Mrs. Don J. Zumwalt and Mrs. Claude Daggett assisted.

During the afternoon a delightful musical program was given. Mr. Harry Borrell, violinist; Mrs. A. J. Voe, vocalist, and Miss Betty Ramsby, accomplished pianist, pleased the guests during the hours with numbers. The closing number on the program was a dance by Jane Daggett and Joe Voe, cleverly costumed in colonial costumes who danced the "Minuet."

At the door the guests were greeted by Jane Daggett and Joe Voe.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Fred Schallack were: Mesdames E. C. Apperson, Gordon MacCracken, Robert E. Wattenburg, Harry Ackley and O. H. Harshbarger.

Mrs. Junior Daggett assisted by her daughter, Margaret, presided at the punch bowl.

More than sixty guests called throughout the afternoon. Mrs. Schallack was assisted in making arrangements by Mrs. Emma Lee Mills, Mrs. Charles Joseph Martin and Mrs. Howard R. Perrin.

This picnic also celebrated the fiftieth wedding anniversary of J. H. Pruitt and Emma Layton by a mock wedding. "LOVE IS MASTER"

By Almy St. John Adecock.

The reactions to Almy St. John Adecock's first novel, "Winter Wheat," were the same in both England and America—surprise at the power and scope in the work of a young woman, in comparison of her novel with those of Thomas Hardy, and an outcry against the ruthless goading of her people to their tragic ends. "Love Is Master" shows that Miss Adecock is following her own start in the main but suggests that she may have listened to criticism in minor matters. She has relieved the somberness of this second novel with humorous passages which seem rather to separate themselves from the central currents of the book and to stand out as concessions. She has also permitted her unhappy lovers to come together, after long and bitter travail. So far and no farther has Miss Adecock modified her position to meet her critics.

Love as Master was the theme of "Winter Wheat" as well as of this second novel. The dark power which draws and binds two perhaps unwilling individuals attracts Miss Adecock as it attracted Emily Bronte. External circumstances and internal determination are alike powerless before it. It cannot be destroyed and misery comes from defying it. Such a theme needs careful watching to keep it safe from melodrama. "Love Is Master" is not always saved. But the essential element in Miss Adecock's work is the tragic significance with which she manages to invert her characters. They do and say awkward, artificial and mechanical things, and yet they stand out in heroic size, creatures of fate rather than of the world. It is in this as much as in the settings and people she selects that she resembles Hardy. Miss Adecock's novels are better in retrospect than in the reading. In memory the characters shake off the trickeries of the story and assume the dignities of their destinies.

THE CRYPTOGRAM BOOK

By Prosper Buranelli, F. Gregory Hartswick and Margaret Petherbridge.

An engaging manual on what to do at a party, written vividly and amusingly illustrated and full of excellent suggestions. The authors have interviewed various more or less known people who have a reputation for having stupid games and making ingenious evenings. Hence there is no old stuff in this book. Try "Mixde Grill," "Scandal," "Gliding the Lily," "Hot Patooties," "Verse and Vice Versa," "In Your Hat," on your guests and be convinced. These minor moralists who are successfully reforming the misspent evenings ought to be commended, and this is one of their best efforts.

If your guests are endowed with analytic brains try the Cryptogram book. It is designed to cure anaemia arising from a deficiency of cross-word puzzles.
