SILHOUETTE

By VIOLET ALLEYN STOREY

Of course, I thought I'd never let him stay,
But, anyhow, I'd save him from the street
And dreadful woes that might befall a cat
So very small and wabbly on his feet.

He was a kitten black as licorice
From spiky tail to wee, shoe-button nose,
His eyes were blackish gray, and dark as soot
Were all the cushions underneath his toes.

I'd bought him from an urchin for a dime,
And, for another dime, when day grew dim,
I'd buy a vial of chloroform, I thought,
And put a swift but gentle end to him.

Or send him to a shelter for stray cats—
This might be kinder. Then I looked, and, oh,
He made the quaintest little silhouette
Against the kitchen surbase, white as snow!

A week before I'd seen some silhouettes
Bring forth, at auction, bids absurdly high,
And these weren't soft and cuddly and alive:
These couldn't give a white-toothed pink-mouthed cry!

And so, I thought I'd name him "Silhouette"
But call him "Silly" almost all the time,
For silhouettes are quite the rage just now
And one can't often buy one for a dime!

Query: Is tile expensive for a bathroom, and do you recommend it? Mrs. S.

Answer: A tile floor is by all means to be desired and preferred for a bathroom. It is more attractive and practical than cement, linoleum or any other kind of floor finish. A good tile floor should cost from $75 to $100 and for a little more than twice that amount the wainscot may be done in tile also.

Query: Will you please tell me what to use for upholstering a chair which is in constant use? MRS. T. D. L.

Answer: One of the newest and most satisfactory materials for your purpose is a smooth mohair, either plain or figured, which may be purchased for from $2.50 to $5 per yard. Brocades and tapestry vary in price from $5 up.

Query: How are the French pictures of flowers put onto pieces of furniture? MRS. A. M. B.

Answers: Transfers may be purchased at several different stores carrying art supplies, and most of them are put on with glue. After they have been allowed to dry for about two hours, the outside paper is dampened and taken off easily, leaving the design on the wood. If the piece of furniture is to have hard usage it is better to varnish over the design with a clear varnish.

Query: What kind of lights should be used in colonial living room? MRS. T.

Answer: Colonial candlesticks, some of which may be fitted with electric globes, wrought iron fixtures, and lamps of very simple design, and wall scones. All shades should be simple, and plain.

Query: What is the newest thing in lamp shades? MRS. W. F.

Answer: Simplicity and richness in color tones. The fussy silk shade is gone. So is the ornate bizarre gaudy shade. You will find yellow and orange shades much better than red or rose shades. They are much easier on the eyes and nerves.

Query: Are tie-back curtains popular now? MRS. T. P. M.

Answer: Many windows and rooms require such a treatment. They are always just a bit fussy and should be used only where the room itself and the furniture permit them.

DREAM-FOREST

Traditional, fragmentary, these simple love songs have yet a freshness of their own, and a charm. They are not distinguished poetry, merely spontaneous and melodious verse, but they give promise. They have a certain lyric virtue in them.—From Saturday Review of Literature.

THE BLADE OF PICARDY
By Fred McLaughlin

The setting of this tale is Mexico during the fall of Maxmilian's empire. Wholly conventional, the novel goes through the commonplaces of honor, love and sword play competently and exhaustively. Mr. McLaughlin writes respectably enough to evade specific adverse criticism, but he gives us nothing whatsoever that might by the most charitable be called fresh or interesting.—Saturday Review of Literature.

ONCE MORE, YE LAURELS
By David Cort

For many reasons this book is to be highly commended. It is a first novel that does well—very well—by its author; it shows him to be a writer of originality, power and trustworthy instince. If he falls at any point it is because his patterns are intrusive and because his work lacks a certain human warmth. But his virtues are definite and gratifying.

The novel is a chronicle, through five generations, of a frustrated family; each generation misses artistic success by the smallest of margins. The last, to whom Mr. Cort devotes half the book, is in a way the sum of the futilities of the four preceding generations. This last, failure, Dorney Dorney-Peters, is not an appealing young man, but the history of his impotence becomes an arresting narrative.

The dominant impression left by "Once More, Ye Laurels" is that of Mr. Cort's resolute artistry. The novel is so carefully planned and executed that it becomes patently artificial; but this excess of form is better—how much better only a book reviewer knows!—than the wandering undecided chronicle that are commonly endured. Tight, trim, careful, Mr. Cort's novel is welcome for its notable craftsmanship, and welcome no less for its gracious exposition of defeat.

LOVELY WEDDING FRIDAY EVENING

The attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Peyton on North Ninth street was the scene of a quiet wedding on Friday evening when Miss Cecile Margaret Lauderdale of Kennewick, Washington, became the bride of Mr. Frank Peyton, well known young man of this city, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Peyton.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock in front of the Old English fireplace which was banked with beautiful gladiolas and palms. Rev. Frank L. Wemett of the First Methodist church officiated.

The bride was charmingly gowned in yellow crepe Romain and carried a bridal bouquet of roses, smilax and baby's breath. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lauderdale of Kennewick, Washington. She was attended by Mrs. Calvin C. Peyton who wore a gown of rose crepe de chine.

The groom was attended by his brother, Calvin C. Peyon. After a wedding supper, the young couple left by train for Kennewick, where they will spend a week at the home of the bride's parents, after which they will return to Diamond Lake to enjoy a week's outing.

Those present at the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Peyton, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Cook, sister and brother-in-law of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin C. Peyton and young son, Mr. and Mrs. Ransom Powell and son, Jimmie, of St. Louis, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Willard Peyton and daughters, Patricia, Marjorie and Virginia, Leslie Peyton, brother of the groom and Roland Sedgwick of St. Louis, who is a house guest of the Peytons.

After a fortnight's honeymoon the young couple will be at home to their friends at 747 North Ninth street.

Roy Brown, president of the Sunset Memorial Park of Eureka, California, in company with Frank E. McGee, vice-president of the Eureka Woolen Mills, were guests in Klamath Falls on Friday. They visited with Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Joyaux on North Sixth. Mr. McGee's sister, Miss Olive McGee of Eureka, spent several weeks last summer here as the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joyaux. The prominent southern visitors left this morning for the north on a combined business and pleasure trip. They are making the trip by motor.
