

KLAMATH 'NAT' TO OPEN SOON

Naturally hot mineral water, pumped from wells, will be used in the 35 by 100 swimming tank on the Klamath Natatorium when it opens about the first week in September, A. Botti, proprietor announced yesterday.

Located at 1719 Main the new natatorium started about two months ago will be completed within three weeks. The pool will be nine feet six inches deep on one end and three feet deep at the shallow end. Total cost of the new building, pool and fixtures will total nearly $45,000, Mr. Botti said.

Individual dressing rooms for women, lockers for both men and women, and private shower baths will be features of the "nat" which is being constructed on the site of the old "Sanitary Baths," also owned by Mr. Botti. A balcony for spectators will circle three sides of the tank, which will be finished with white cement.

Only one other source of the same mineral water is known in the world. That is a cold spring in Germany, according to the proprietor. The water here will have a natural tank heat of about 80 degrees.

The natatorium will be open for inspection two days before it is officially opened for use, in order that people may see the accommodations which will be offered. Space in the building is being provided for a soda and sandwich counter, a beauty parlor and one or two other concessions. Mr. Botti and his family have moved to the city to make their home.

Colonel George Harvey Passes

Against League They broke soon afterward, however, when Wilson felt Harvey's Wall street connections were embarrassing. Whether justified or not, Harvey always felt Wilson had been ungrateful and he became a bitter enemy and one who had as much as any man perhaps in robbing Wilson of the supreme triumph. American ratification of the treaty of Versailles and membership in the League of Nations.

It was Harvey, who wrote in vitriol, who set the pace for the anti-league arguments. He spent most of his time in Washington during the league fight, meeting with the Senate irreconcilables each night after the day's session, suggesting as to strategy, coining phrases at which he was adept, spotting the openings through which the big guns in the Senate could be directed. He sat in the "Senate" galleries throughout the debate, watching it step by step, conferring constantly with Senators Lodge, Borah, Hiram Johnson, and the late Senator Brandegee of Connecticut.

Helps Elect Harding Again in 1920 Harvey played an influential part in national affairs. It was in his room at the Blackstone hotel in Chicago that the Republican insiders met after midnight one night during the convention and dickered over the nomination, finally selecting Warren G. Harding as the candidate.

Harvey immediately became one of Harding's principal advisers, spending much time at Marlon, writing large sections of Harding's speeches and in fact preparing practically all of his utterances on the League of Nations and foreign affairs. They played golf together, and spent their evenings together.

Named Ambassador When Harding was elected, he made Harvey ambassador to Great Britain. Harvey created much amusement in London by riding around in a Ford automobile, by his "stovepipe" hat which he always wore and his horn-rimmed glasses—he was one of the first to wear this type of eye glass which is now regarded as typically American all over the world.

Harvey is credited with having done a difficult job in the British war debt settlement negotiations. Resigning, he returned to America and became editor of the Washington Post at the insistence of his old friend, and boon companion, Ned McClean.

Returns to U. S. After a year he passed from the public eye, wrote a biography of the late Henry C. Frick, steel magnate, and edited the North American Review. A few weeks ago Senator George Moses, an old friend and associate in the League of Nations fight, visited him hoping to get him to join the campaign for Herbert Hoover. But Harvey always fought Hoover.

In fact there are so many points on which Harvey and Governor Smith agree that had he lived, the famous editor might soon have been back in the Democratic party where he started.

From Modoc County Times: Practically an entire band of sheep were burned to death last Friday when they were entrapped in a grass fire which swept over a large area east of Cedarville.

The band included about 1,200 head of grown ewes and about 1,000 lambs. Only 200 sheep were saved out of this number. The flock belonged to F. E. Bush, Modoc county banker and stock man, and Frank Murphy, stock-raiser of Surprise valley.

Hassell Plane Lost in Arctic

(Continued From Page One) cutter reported that they had been "running" the observation stations along the line of flight which Hassell and Cramer mapped out and none of the stations had been heard of the flyers. The Marlon confirmed earlier reports that it was the only ship plying the waters of Davis strait and added that none but the most hardy of vessels could weather some of the storms which sweep that body of water at this season.

Probably Lost Although it is possible the plane succeeded in crossing Davis strait and came to a landing in some remote portion of Greenland or also returned to the Labrador coast and made a forced landing after striking out across the water, the general belief here tonight was that the plane probably made a landing on the open water, in which event the flyers probably were lost.

The first action in a wide search for the two flyers was in the form of orders from Washington to the coast guard cutter Marlon. The cutter has been on iceberg observation work between Labrador and Greenland and she was ordered to proceed to the assistance of the Rockford flyers.

No Word At Mount Evans Representative Buckbee of Illinois asked the navy to aid in the search. The Marlon was the only vessel in the area and she was at once ordered to do everything possible to get in touch with Hassell and Cramer.

United Press reports from points along the route of the flight or from the scheduled destination of the Greater Rockford were pessimistic.

Mount Evans had no word from the plane, which was expected to land there at the end of the second lap of its trip. The United Press correspondent at Copenhagen reported no radio messages from Cramer had been received at a late hour from many stations along the route.

Farm Leaders Endorse Hoover

Five Steps Made "As I looked upon your fields of growing grain, I was convinced that the farmers of Kansas need make no apology to other industries for their contribution to the national efficiency."

The special train that is bearing Hoover to his birthplace, West Branch, Ia., where Tuesday he will make a farm speech, made five stops in Kansas today. These were at Dodge City, Hutchinson, Newton, Emporia, Topeka, and then into Missouri with a 20-minute stop tonight at Kansas City.

Mayor Albert L. Beach, of Kansas City, and a delegation of Republican leaders were to confer with Hoover in Kansas City where no speech was to be made.

Copper Gives Hope Senator Arthur Capper, the dry agricultural farm editor, and 50 other Kansas Republican leaders who boarded the train at Dodge City to meet the nominee, assured Hoover that his staff marketing water was farm relief plan was being favorably received.

"There will be a Hoover landslide in the agricultural states that will be plainly evident by the middle of October," Capper predicted. Every state west of the Mississippi river will go for Hoover, Capper added.

Hoover's reference to prohibition in his acceptance speech is accepted in Kansas as evidence that Hoover's views are sane dry, Capper declared.

Democrats for Hoover "Reports I have received indicate half of the Democrats of Kansas are either going to remain away from the polls or vote for Hoover," Capper said. "The Democratic farmers are dry and they had accepted Hoover's stand against nullification and for the Eighteenth amendment and its enforcement law at its face value." Herbert Hoover, Jr., eldest son

3,000 Give Welcome

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 20. (UP)—Making his last stop before he reached West Branch, Ia., where a homecoming celebration will be held Tuesday, Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential nominee, paused here for 20 minutes tonight.

Hoover's special train was transferred from the Santa Fe to the Rock Island tracks and left here at 9 p. m. The train will reach West Branch about 7 a. m. Tuesday. An extra car was added to accommodate an Iowa delegation which will escort him to his birthplace at West Branch.

No reception was accorded Hoover here as facilities at the train sheds would not permit the general public coming to the train. Mayor Beach of Kansas City informally welcomed the nominee, who made no speech. At Topeka, the last stop in Kansas, Hoover was welcomed by a crowd of 3,000. In a brief speech, he thanked them for the greeting.

I take my prescriptions to the Pelican Dr. and they are always right. Try them and you will also be satisfied.—Adv. 18-1f.

the giant's highway...

The Redwood Empire is one of the scenic wonders of the world—a land of giant redwood forests, of rivers and lakes, of rugged coast, of majestic mountains, of gorgeously colored canyons, smiling valleys. From the Golden Gate to Grant's Pass, the Redwood Highway takes you through a country that is the very spirit of the West.

See the real West on your trip this summer — your automobile club or any touring bureau will tell you all about this and other "different" places.

Sometimes you'll find the going a bit tough, but it will be easier if you use Castorlube.

Few people are as hard on a car as a travelling salesman — he expects and demands 100% performance, and then some. Read what one of the Trupak representatives says about Castorlube.

Castorlube Refining Co., San Francisco, Calif.

"...it's no cream puff territory"

P. O. Box 371, Eureka, Calif.
Castorlube Refining Co.

Gentlemen: When Mr. Hallahan, our sales manager, first told me about Castorlube I was using _____ oil, which I thought was the best Eastern oil I could buy. I tried some on his say so but didn't pay much attention to it until I made Crescent City the first time after I put it in. Then believe me it put that Nash of mine in the Rolls Royce class because outside of a few mud holes in the timber I made this entire trip on the high. In two weeks I did it again and made the Singly hill on high from low gear as some cows blocked the way at the foot. I never did that before. Then I watched the oil and made 3472 miles on two quarts added and hadn't had my valves ground in

15,000 miles. (Just had them ground and refilled the crank case with Castorlube again.)

I cover about 2800 miles a month making out of Eureka to close to Grant's Pass, Oregon, and this is no cream puff territory as far as roads are concerned.

A lot of wisenheimer knockers told me the castor oil in Castorlube would gum up the engine, and almost had me believing it. Well, it hasn't gummed it yet and I've used it all winter and the engine starts easier than when I used _____ oil.

Your salesman told me that you would be interested in getting the facts about how your oil operated over these bum roads. It surely made a booster out of me. Yours truly, H. H. Loewenthal.

*In letter mentioned a high-grade Eastern oil.
