"WAY OVER YONDER"

Dr. Charles Edward Bishop has been made a professor emeritus by the University of West Virginia. After spending 50 years studying and teaching Greek, he has retired from active service; but he retains a desk in the university hall which houses Greek statuary, and there he remains every day, moving quietly about among the relics of an age that passed away more than 2000 years ago.

The old gentleman explains his refusal to leave the place thus:

"I found Greek too interesting to give up. I love to study it; there is such a bigness to the classics—such a way-over-yonder-ness to it."

It is a homely expression that he uses; an informal, folksy sort of remark to make about a subject that usually calls for stilted language and flowery verbiage. But it shows very plainly just how he feels about it, and somehow it makes one feel that this old gentleman, retired to the very modest comfort of a superannuated professor's pension, is fortunate and contented.

There are various kinds of success stories afloat in this country, and most of them begin with the subject slaving for a dollar a day and end with the same man lolling at his ease in a Long Island estate, with a $100,000-a-year income and a stable of blooded servants—no, wait, it's blooded horses. Anyway, they represent success chiefly as a steady upward climb in the financial world, and that's too bad. It's quite possible for a man to retire in his 50's on $40 a week, and still be eminently successful.

The ends that men seek in this world are many and varied; but nearly all of them—the ones worth pursuing, that is—are built about some phrase or other of that "way-over-yonder-ness" that Dr. Bishop speaks about.

Every man in his youth at last, gets a gleam from "way over yonder." Sometimes it's one thing, and sometimes it's another; but always it is something more or less apart from the workaday world—a glimpse of a fairer time, perhaps, either in the future or in the past, in which one's possibilities in life could be given fuller rein in which there would be fewer of the things one does because one has to, and more of the things one does because one likes to.

And most of us, more or less unconsciously, spend the HERBERT HOOVER is on his way back to America and work, arriving next week. He will plan his cabinet, consulting many, and doing exactly as he pleases. And in two months he will take charge of the situation.

MR. COOLIDGE did exactly the right thing after the war, when the country needed two things, first to save money, second, to be let alone, free from dangerous experimenting.

MR. HOOVER'S reputation as a president will depend on the things that he himself actually does.

Fortunately for him, he is trained as an engineer, trained in government work, and he knows from careful study what the country needs.

WALL STREET started the new year cheerfully, as was to be expected. With a first class president going out, and a first class president coming in, and all the skies rosy, why should Wall street be sad?

WHAT we call the universe, with its Milky Way, in which our sun is a tiny speck, and its thousand million stars, each a sun with planets revolving around it, turns out to be only one little corner of the universe.

SCIENTISTS will tell you that 1,000 universes surround us, some as far away as the distance that light could travel in 1,000,000 years going 186,000 miles a second.

DR. OSBORN, head of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, rebukes another scientist who dragged into scientific discussion the greater part of our lives looking for a realization of that gleam. For, in point of fact, we are not satisfied with our world. We know it could easily be a much better place than it is. We keep that vision from "way over yonder" tucked away in the back of our heads, and because we have seen perfection we fret at having to endure perfection.

So the old professor at West Virginia University is fortunate—and successful. At the close of a lifetime of work he is able to retire to a quiet nook and steep himself in the things that come from "way over yonder."

Most of us never get that close to it. Old age and comparative poverty are cheap prices to pay for it.

Easy Street has advantages, but the adjective doesn't always fit the residents' conscience.

I care not who makes the country's reform laws if I can right its wrongs.

Of course times are good. In ordinary times, none but the rich men can lose money on their farms.

P. O. Department economy has about gone its limit until somebody invents a paper even more flimsy for stamps.

statement that man "needs to change his concept of God."

WHAT SCIENCE calls the one thousand universes are probably only one thousand little hills, with millions like them scattered through infinite space.

WHEN the bartender placed a glass of water beside her glass of gin, an old lady in an English public house said: "Young man, I have trouble enough without drinking water."

LET SCIENTIFIC FACTS speak for themselves. If men need to change their concept of God, they will find it out themselves. They won't change it to order.

EVERYTHING gets bigger. William Fox will build at Broadway and Forty-Seventh street, New York, a forty-story building to contain the biggest moving picture theatre. When this is done, somebody else, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount or somebody, will come along and build a fifty-story building and a bigger theatre. These are days of big things, and the business of government is NOT to interfere with them. Let the builders and business men see what they can do.

MR. CHARLES GIOVANNI locked herself in a room, turned on the gas and died. Her farewell note said her husband "had another," and under the circumstances she could not possibly live.

THE UNHAPPY WOMAN told of her husband's neglect and repeated several times that she loved him, with a shaking hand, before she wrote, wishing him a happy New Year.

SPOILED A GOOD THING

AMARILLO, Texas, Jan. 4.—Police court here has definitely stopped a weekly contribution of $10 to its coffers. It was made by a young man who enjoyed both his work and his booze. Finally the court got tired of the regularity of the liquor charge and raised the fine to $250. Pronto, the contributor left town and has not been seen here since.

MODOC POINT

MRS. J. C. KAUBLE
News Correspondent

MODOC POINT, Ore., Jan. 4. (Special)—The weather in this community has changed and now it is quite warm here.

Mrs. M. E. Kanauss is confined to her home with an attack of illness.

The New Year's Eve dance was a wonderful success, with a good crowd in attendance. Barbecue sandwiches and turkey were served at a late hour. At the midnight hour little Bobby Dixon, representing the "New Year," and E. L. Dixon as "Father Time," gave a little act which was enjoyed. Dancing until 3 o'clock followed.

MALIN HIGH NOTES

(Special Correspondent)
MALIN, Ore., Jan. 4.—A short Christmas vacation was enjoyed by the students of both Malin schools. The main features of the holidays were skating and sleighing. School opened again January 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Street and son, Francis, spent the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Street's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sedgel, who live in Ten-mile, Ore. While there he attended a meeting and banquet of the lettermen of Roseburg high school, from which he graduated in 1910.

The Klamath county basketball season opens January 18, with the various teams playing in their own divisions. The schools are grouped in two divisions. Klamath Falls, Henley and Chiloquin are in the first division and Malin, Merrill and Bonanza are in the second division. Malin will play her first game at Chiloquin on January 11, but this is not a scheduled game.

Charles Weaver, Malin grade principal, accompanied by Harold Ashley, teacher at Keno, and Mrs. Carrie Anderson, Malin, made a trip to San Francisco during the Christmas holidays. They returned late Monday evening.

A farewell party and dance was given at the Bohemian hall Tuesday, January 1, for Mr. Prihoda. During the evening he was presented with a splendid gift in appreciation of his services while here. The greater part of the evening was devoted to dancing.

After Ice Crown

Leo Kamarad, sophomore at Malin high school, smashed two of his fingers while cutting wood New Year's day. He was immediately taken to Dr. Trout, where his fingers received treatment.

Nellie Stewart, freshman, a student of the Malin high school, is confined at her home with an attack of measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jackson have been staying at the home of Mrs. Jackson's parents while Mr. Kirkpatrick is on the jury in Klamath Falls. They will continue to stay until Mr. Kirkpatrick returns home.

Many students attended the New Year dance at the Broadway theatre Monday night. Supper was served in the hall at midnight. The snappy music made the dance enjoyable to everyone. Another dance will be given at the Broadway on January 12.

Neal and Tinsman Crake, sophomores at Oregon State college, returned to Corvallis January 1, to attend school winter quarter.

Jerry Rajous has returned from a two months' chit in Oakland, Calif.

L. Wells, former principal of Malin grade school, now teaching in Modesto, Calif., is spending his vacation with his folks on Lake lake.

Dr. Lloyd Goble Buys Dwellings

Through a real estate deal closed on Thursday, Dr. Lloyd Goble became the owner of a modern duplex residence at 320, 322 North Ninth and a modern four-room home adjoining this property.

The property was sold through Dale and Hosking, realtors, and was purchased from Louis Noll. While the exact consideration was not made public it is understood the deal involved something more than $15,000.

Dr. and Mrs. Goble plan to occupy one section of the duplex while the other two homes will be rented.

A considerable sum of money will be spent by Dr. Goble in remodeling the property and adding a number of built-in fixtures.

Undereating leads to tuberculosis and other diseases

If THE mothers and young girls of this country could have heard the addresses before the Annual Philadelphia Tuberculosis Conference, something would be done and done quickly to stamp out the dangerous under-dieting by young girls.

The addresses of this meeting were made public through the Philadelphia Public Ledger. "The most difficult problem facing us in combating tuberculosis among high-school girls, and particularly among the young women of today, is the vicious habits they practice to retain or acquire a slim and graceful figure."

"We don't seem to be able to save them," says . . . "the problem of nutrition is the one we have to face in our examination of girls of this age. It is at this age that girls are most susceptible to tuberculosis and other diseases."

Parents must put an end to the dangerous dieting of young people. Thousands of older women have been seriously and permanently injured by extreme dieting to reduce weight. It is even more serious for growing girls to starve themselves.

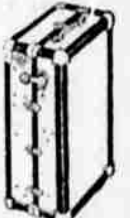

Tempt the appetites of your family with deliciously sweetened cereals and fruits for breakfast, with abundant canned and fresh vegetables sweetened to taste, and with fresh, dried and canned fruits for desserts. The Sugar Institute.
