Heedless

I know so well what a day should be,
And all that a day should measure
Of human kindness and friendly deeds
That make life's fund of pleasure.

I know so well what a day should hold,
And all that a day's deserving
Of honest toil and hope and plan—
Whatever the gods we're serving.

I know so well what a day should seem
In memory, when it's ended;
A thrilling page in a wonder-book,
Where were facts and fancies blended.

I know all this yet the days go by
Unfilled with my own best giving,
That might, in little ways, improve
The hours that I am living.

DARROW CLUB MEETS AT SANDERS HOME

Members of the Darrow club met January 15 at the home of Mrs. Margaret Sanders on Applegate street. After the business meeting, which was called to order by President Lottie Massey, an apron bazaar was held and many pretty aprons were sold. The proceeds were placed in the flower fund.

STOCKINGS MAKE OR MAR MILADY'S COSTUME

Development of fashion has reached the stage where a woman's stockings can make or mar her costume for the day. Writing in the Woman's Home Companion, a fashion authority declares that this season, more than ever before, the chic of an outfit depends on what appears "below the hem line."

"Beware that glare of pink when you pick out a flesh stocking," says the writer. "Ladies lie along the line of flat sunburn tones. Another thing about flesh tints is that a blonde can wear considerably lighter tones than a brunette.

"The smartest stocking for evening is that which gives an impression that the natural flesh tint which is seen in the arms and neck have been ever so faintly tinged with the color of the dress. Nothing does more to harden an otherwise soft evening costume than a pair of stockings that fail to repeat the soft flesh tones of the arm and neck."

Fashion this year, says the writer, calls for hosiery in flat gray blue or deep smoky tones, to be worn with dark blue costumes. Puffy-colored stockings go best with dark green, while all smart gray costumes hosiery must be of the nude tones or a cold effect is obtained. The Parisienne wears dark stockings such as gunmetal or black, only when she is in deep mourning. A smoky-tinted stocking lowers the morale of the whole ensemble, thinks the writer.
