

FORD BELIEVES EDISON HAPPY; GIVES FORMULA

Auto Magnate Says Urge to Do Things, Work, Bring Happiness

Editors Note: Henry Ford, who agrees with his friend Thomas A. Edison on most questions, takes issue with the inventor in the following interview, granted exclusively to the United Press. Edison is happy and doesn't know it, the manufacturer thinks, and proceeds to give his formula for a happy and useful life.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 20. (UP)—Henry Ford with an artist's view of the unity of the universe, was revealed in an interview with the United Press today at his winter home here.

Happiness Formula

Ford gave his formula for happiness. He picked out Thomas A. Edison, his winter neighbor, and long time friend as an example of a truly happy man. He traced the course of Edison's life and showed why he believed the 52 year old inventor as one of the happiest of beings—although he may not believe it himself.

Ford tapped on his desk with a pencil and said:

Ambition and Hard Work

"You ask my formula for happy life. It is ambition and hard work. Show me a man who is deeply interested in his work—one who is not working for pay day—and I will show you a happy man."

Ford generalized still further, before driving home his point that Edison was an example of a happy man.

"We are put on this earth to work and in work rests our happiness," he declared.

Cites Edison As Happy

The motor magnate, who agrees with his cronies on almost everything, imparted in the interview that they disagree on the number of happy persons in the world. In his birthday interview, Feb. 11, Edison said he was not acquainted with anyone who was happy.

"Mr. Edison does not think anyone is happy Ford said. 'I have a little different idea about it. I will put him up as an example of happiness.'"

"I think that work and a person's interest in work brings about more true happiness than any other one thing."

Ambition Happiness

"Ambition to do great things to that end is surely the happiness of any human life. Look at Mr. Edison for example—for he is the finest example I know. He is happy in his work. He forgets everything else. He sees nothing else and he lives for nothing else. And above all else he is happy himself despite the fact he told newspapermen that he does not know a happy man."

"You might inquire why Mr. Edison is so happy and how he obtained his happiness," Ford continued. "Well, as a boy he was happy. He had good times in boyhood and he often talks about them. As a young man he was happy as a telegraph operator, a newspaper editor and finally a young inventor. He was happy simply because he was always working towards a goal."

Incentive To Work

"He always had an incentive to work. His thoughts were occupied by visions. He had dreams of turning night into day. He made those dreams come true with the electric light. He had visions of the reproduction of voice and sound on a record. He worked until those visions were realities."

"As a matter of fact, he has always been thoroughly happy in his work. He has had great ambitions since boyhood and I think those ambitions made him a happy man."

Hoarding Money Bad

Ford then turned to discussion of his formula for a happy life—ambition and hard work."

"Hoarding money is a bad practice for young men. I don't believe in it. I think that a young man should invest all the money he can earn in himself. He should spend it on his education and the things that go to make him a better man. When he reaches middle age is the time to give thought to saving for declining years."

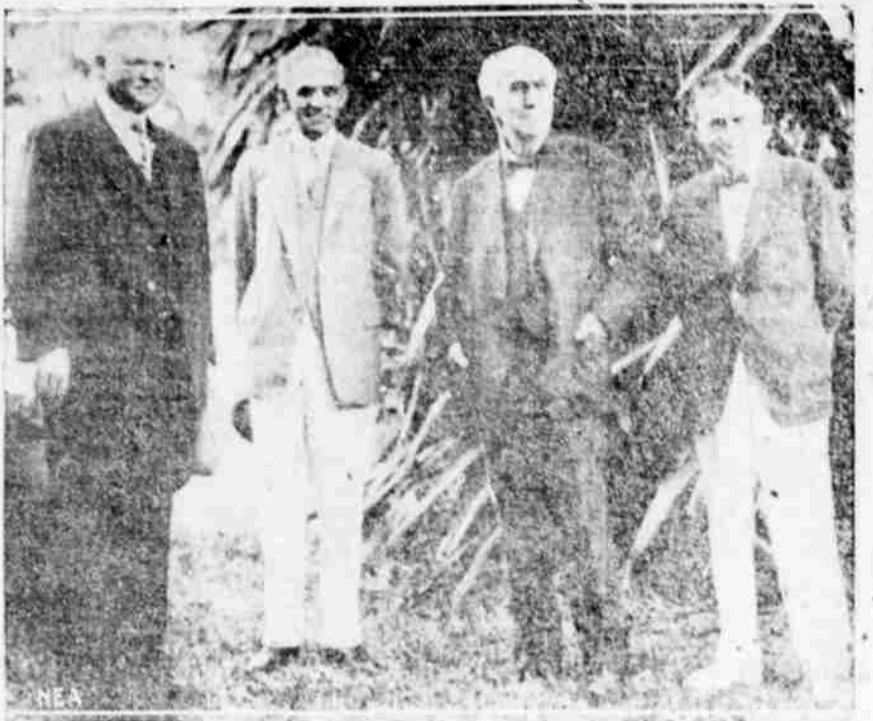

"Every boy should be given a fair chance at happiness. When a boy reaches 14 or 15 years of age and shows a tendency to delve into experiments, or do a little more work than he is paid for doing, you can put him down as a prospect of useful manhood."

Compliments Edison

Edison, according to Ford, "has done more for mankind than any other man." He said he was an example of the "boy who made good."

"He has ambitions and even at the age of 52, he is working night and day on experiments"

EDISON'S EIGHTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY

The famous quartet which once included Thomas A. Edison, Luther Burbank, Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, and which was completed by Herbert Hoover, the naturalist after Burbank's death, were again here filled—and now it's President-elect Hoover who joins with Ford and Firestone in wishing the famous inventor best wishes on his 82nd birthday. This NEA photograph to The Klamath News shows, left to right, Hoover, Ford, Edison, Firestone, at Fort Myers, Florida.

Runs Off Road To Hit Skunk

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Feb. 20. (UP)—"I had to run off the road to hit him," explained Otto Erickson of this city, who proudly displayed tonight a skunk pelt but slightly damaged by tire treadmarks.

Otto was returning from Bendon last night when the headlights fell upon a large and apparently sleeping skunk in the ditch beside the road.

Whether it was the thrill of the chase or a desire for a pelt that motivated Otto is not known, but a quick turn of the steering wheel and Mr. Skunk had departed to skunk heaven in a cloud of dust.

Elk Barbecue Is Assured by Officer's Word

That puzzling question of how to provide elk meat for the state convention of the Elks lodge in Klamath Falls next summer, has been solved.

The R. P. O. E. may gorge on elk meat and, at the same time, the herd of Klamath elk ranging in the upper Wood river valley country, will remain intact.

The problem was solved by a letter received by Marion J. Barnes, district game warden, from Ray Steink, Portland, federal game warden.

There are elk in abundance on the national game range of Montana, and the United States government is quite anxious to remove the animals because they are eating up the range which was set aside for buffalo.

For the most of shooting, cleaning, packing and shipping, the lodge has cost as many elk as they want. Cost per animal, exclusive of shipping, will be between $46 and $50.

In fact, the game warden remarked, it would be possible to ship several animals alive to Klamath Falls.

The first proposal was to kill several head of the elk herd in Klamath. This was vetoed by the state game commission.

Old Oregon Trail Blocked by Water

THE DALLES, Ore., Feb. 20. (UP)—The Old Oregon Trail highway was blocked tonight when a stream of water three feet deep, caused by rapidly melting snow, ran over the highway.

Cars were being halted at The Dalles and Biggs.

There was no advice from the highway office as to when the water would subside.

LAST TO HANG?

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 20.—The supreme court today granted a writ of supersedeas and error to William Hauke, sentenced to hang March 15 for the murder of a woman. Hauke would be the last person to hang in Cook county, as a new law provides electrocution where capital punishment is inflicted.

which will benefit the United States to a great extent when completed.

"A man who loves his work is generally a happy man," he concluded.

Shepherd Loses $1100 in Ten Days, Drunk Three Times

He is just a shepherd and has been for 25 years, he said. Ten days ago he came to Klamath Falls with savings of a year—$1100 in all.

Yesterday after he had paid his third fine in ten days for being drunk he had $25 left.

"There is one of the boys down in the jail that wants a dollar's worth of matches and stuff, I'll give him a dollar," the old herder said, thinking probably of times when he was in the mountains and could not get matches and tobacco.

He told of coming here ten days ago with $1100. Then he walked his hands in an "I don't know" manner.

Police said that he gave the money away when he was drunk to whomsoever asked for it.

"What did you do it for?" the Judge asked him when the three drunks were mentioned.

"That's the way with us shepherders," the old man said. "Maybe I won't see a town again for nine months." A friend took him back to his home.

The first time he appeared in the judge fined him $10.

The second time he was fined $25.

Yesterday he was fined $25 and 12 days in jail—the maximum penalty for being drunk—A doctor's examination showed that he could not stay in jail.

He paid the fine and was taken to his mountain home by a friend. He had been on his annual "sprees."

Mexican Situation Suggest Renaming Street 'Crater Lake Boulevard'

NOGALES, Ariz., Feb. 20. (UP)—Word received from the wilds south of Nogales, Sonora, Mexico that General Francisco H. Manzo had departed for his headquarters at Ortiz, as announced, but was camped secretly with troops awaiting developments, caused considerable excitement on the border tonight.

The report caused local observers to believe that the revolt, thought to have been averted through Monday's parley by General Manzo and high Mexican officials, was simply postponed temporarily and that something was about to break soon.

Others scoff at the idea that the general and his troops are still in this vicinity and believe that widespread publicity given the apparent hostile moves and the parley settled everything as far as Sonora was concerned.

Excitement has been high on the border since Sunday night when General Manzo, in charge of Sonora and west coast of Mexico military division, arrived under darkness with a staff of officers and troops.

Tonight, plans were being made on this side of the international line should hostilities start.

Mrs. E. H. Balsiger left last evening for Los Angeles, California, where she will remain for an indefinite stay with relatives and friends.

"Hello, old man! What do you know?"

"Ask me next month. I've just bought an encyclopedia on easy payments."

WAYS-MEANS FOR BUDGET

Kozer Recommendations Changed But Little; O.S.C. Is Left

STATE HOUSE, Salem, Ore., Feb. 20. (UP)—With the end of the legislative session in sight the ways and means committee has now practically completed its work by approving the budget estimates recommended to them by Governor Patterson through his budget director, S. A. Kozer.

In only a few instances has the committee deviated from these recommendations as set out in the regular budget and in these deviations they have been guided almost entirely by representations of department and institution heads.

Most of the deviations have resulted in increased allowances. In only a few minor instances have there been any reduction from the budget estimates as presented to the committees.

The request of the Oregon State college is the only budget that yet remains unattended to. They have requested $185,000 for investigations and research work. Every effort of the college contingent on the committee to bring about action on this item has been frustrated by the university members of the committee.

These members of the committee, who are in the majority and are apparently playing the college budget against special appropriations being sought by the university at this session for extension courses, research work and other activities, aggregating in excess of $280,000.

Arrest Transient On Larceny Charge

William H. Grubb was lodged in the city jail late last night on an open larceny charge. He was arrested as he stepped from an S. P. freight train at the depot here by Officer Dugan.

It was stated by the officer that Grubb had entered the train crew's quarters while the crew was eating at Mt. Hebron. He was said to have stolen a shirt and some other personal property from a fireman on the train.

Word was wired to Klamath Falls, and when Grubb, a hobnob got off the train Officer Dugan said that he found the articles of clothing in Grubb's possession.

Stores to Close Friday, Feb. 22

Klamath housewives are advised to remember in their marketing today that tomorrow, February 22, is Washington's birthday, and all businesses will close for the day.

All Klamath stores will be closed as well as the banks, city hall offices and the county court house. A large number of the residents have already made plans to motor to Fort Klamath to attend the third annual winter carnival.
