Ring Lardner Says Yanks, Cubs to Win

But the joke was on him.

By the way, he has long legs, a wife and four sons to amuse, and an expression of ineffable sadness.

"Who will finish first in the American League this year?" Mr. Lardner was asked.

Yanks and Cubs?

"You mean after the Yankees? Philadelphia," he replied. A moment later the author of the famous "You Know Me, Al," stories of baseball life had closed his eyes and settled the National League dispute in favor of Chicago.

After this the prying into his private life began.

Like's Jack's Nose

Q. Which of his many sterling qualities most arouses your admiration of James Joseph Tanney?

A. His knack of putting more syllables into a one-syllable word than anybody else.

Q. Which of his many sterling qualities most arouses your admiration for Jack Dempsey?

A. His nose.

Q. As you look back on your life in Great Neck, which was the incident you most enjoyed?

A. I could give you a great incident in Great Neck, but you couldn't use it. This incident was connected with Scott Fitzgerald and perhaps we had better not brought the subject up. Q. As you look back on your life in Niles, Michigan, what was the incident you most enjoyed?

Two Jews Best Story

A. I worked in Boston during the year 1911. I got married that year. Then I quit, or rather got fired from, the American, and went back to Chicago and worked till 1915. I thought I had been doing pretty well and so I went back to Niles for a visit in the home town. The first fellow I met on the street was one of my boyhood friends. We were really buddies. He recognized me, all right, and said, "How do you like Boston?" Q. Which do you consider your best story?

A. The one about the two Jews.

Mr. Lardner looked much relieved after these confessions. He hadn't been interviewed so thoroughly, he said, for a long time. It seemed to have done him a lot of good.
