WIFE MURDERER'S JEKYLL-HYDE LIFE STORY REVEALED

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 12. (U. P.)—A dual life so complex as to astound the most experienced psycho-pathologists lay revealed to New Jersey police tonight as they pieced together the story of Henry Colla Campbell, confessed "torch murderer" of his bigamous wife. Campbell, white haired civil engineer, cultured in the arts and a graduate of Columbia university, maintained a perfect calm through the entire day as he unfolded to detectives the details of Somerset county's most sensational mystery slaying since the Hall-Mills case.

Married For $1,000
He told them with no break in his composure how, although blessed with a perfect family life, he had proposed through a matrimonial agency to Mrs. Mildred Mowrey, middle-aged nurse, had married her for her $1,000 savings, and then, five months later, had shot her on an automobile ride, soaked her clothes with gasoline and burned the body to cloak the woman's identity. During those five months he lived in perfect domestic happiness with a wife, to whom he had been married 15 years, and three children, whom he worshipped, and spent less than a dozen nights away from home.

Happy Home Life
Mrs. Roselea McCready Campbell, near a collapse after hearing of her husband's confession, furnished a picture of the Campbell's home life that left authorities at a loss tonight to explain the many strange actions and episodes that they found jammed into the private life of the engineer.

"I know no one will believe me," said Mrs. Campbell. "I don't know what it's all about. But he was always so fine. In all the 15 years we have been married he never used a cross word to me. "I don't know what happened" (Continued on Page Two)

Prohi's Object to Sale of Liquor On Ocean Liners
WASHINGTON, April 12. (U. P.)—Prohibition developments ramified through several government agencies here today, with chief interest centered still on the decision by the United States lines, formerly government-owned vessels, to sell liquor to thirsty Americans.

Developments today were: 1. Federal prohibition authorities raised legal objections to the plan of the United States lines to sell their medicinal liquor on the east-bound voyage from the dry United States to Europe, though only an act of congress can prevent sale on the home-coming voyage. 2. Drys were considering such an act of congress to make the sea, as well as the land, bone dry.

3. President Hoover decided to wait for the regular December session before recommending legislation for transfer of prohibition enforcement activities from the treasury to the justice department. Action at the extra session may be possible, but appears improbable. 4. The justice department began weeding out district attorneys. (Continued on Page Five)

Fliers Lost While Searching for 'Southern Cross'

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 12. (U. P.)—Serious alarm was felt tonight for the safety of Capt. Keith Anderson and his companion, who have been missing since they left Allee Springs Wednesday to search for the airplane Southern Cross, which later was found on the mud flats 30 miles south of Port George. Rescue parties were ordered to Manja Station, about 20 miles from the position of the Southern Cross, with gasoline and supplies for the stranded crew, and preparations were made to search for Anderson and his mechanic in the Wyndham area.

Elaborate plans for the rescue of the four Southern Cross fliers were being carried out tonight. An attempt may be made to remove the plane under its own power when gasoline supplies are provided, if the craft is not damaged. Capt. Charles P. T. Ulm, T. H. McWilliams, H. A. Lichfield and Kingsford-Smith all were reported safe and moving about their plane in the almost impenetrable jungle by Captain Holden, who first sighted them as he flew over the river area. Holden's radio message was the first word of their safety.

Holden dropped food supplies to the men and circled over them a number of times before flying back to Wyndham. He will direct the rescue expedition from the air and may be able to communicate with the stranded fliers by wireless, it was said.

Mary Jo Walsh Dies This Morning

After a brave three weeks' fight against a disease whose death toll has been heavy, Miss Mary Jo Walsh passed away at the county isolation hospital shortly before 2 o'clock this morning from complications resulting after an attack of spinal meningitis. Miss Walsh was the teacher at the Ewauna camp school, where she contracted the disease about three weeks ago. Until last Wednesday her condition was improving, and she had laughed and joked with those she saw at the hospital, apparently always in a cheerful frame of mind. But Wednesday complications set in, and after the fearful attack already made by the disease upon her body, she grew steadily worse, sometimes having a fever of 102 degrees, according to the attending physician.

When the convalescent stage was reached, the father and sister of Miss Walsh, who were called here from Vancouver, returned to their northern home, believing it would be only a matter of time until she would be well again. The remains are in the care of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home. Funeral arrangements are pending word from relatives.

Hate Leads Woman To Tell Of Plot To Clear Evangelist

Mrs. Seilaff Says Judge Hardy and Herself Evolved Plan to Have Another Woman in Carmel Cottage. Blames Aimee for Entire Affair in Bitter Speech.

SACRAMENTO, April 12. (U. P.)—Hate—the bitter hate of one woman for another, thrust itself into the Hardy impeachment trial today when Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Seilaff, famous "Miss X" of the Aimee Semple McPherson kidnapping case, took the witness stand.

Simply and in a straightforward manner Mrs. Seilaff told of how she and Judge Hardy had planned together to procure a woman who would say that it was she, and not Aimee McPherson, who occupied a "love nest" at Carmel, with Kenneth G. Ormiston.

Know Judge Hardy?
Mrs. Seilaff slipped into town early today. She appeared in court when it convened, sitting at the side of the room. Melvyn Cronin of the board of managers prosecuting the trial called her name as the first witness and she took the stand. The first question by Cronin was: "Mrs. Seilaff, do you know Judge Carlos S. Hardy?"

"I certainly do," she replied in a clear, emphatic voice, gazing directly at the white-haired jurist being tried for impeachment, sitting across from her at his counsel's table. Then began the narration of the story which had never before been told in a court of law. Of how she called on Judge Hardy and said that she was the woman who could produce a fictitious partner for Ormiston at Carmel. Of how the judge told her she would be doing a great work in clearing Mrs. McPherson's name. Of how they discussed plans for producing this woman.

Bitter Toward Judge?
Court recessed after Mrs. Seilaff had been on the stand for an hour or more. Spectators and newspapermen gathered about the courtroom, discussing the almost vicious manner in which Mrs. Seilaff snapped out answers to questions which pertained directly to Judge Hardy and Mrs. McPherson.

Mrs. Seilaff had stepped from the witness stand and taken a seat nearby during the recess. A small group surrounded her. "Are you bitter toward Judge Hardy, Mrs. Seilaff?" someone asked. "Why, no" "Why, no; what makes you think so?" she quickly asked, turning questioning eyes to the inquirer. "But surely you must have some feeling in this trial, you wouldn't have come all these miles to testify if you were not interested," another of the group remarked. The barriers were suddenly broken and Mrs. Seilaff started talking, her brown eyes narrowing venomously as she spoke.

Blames Aimee
"They haven't gotten Aimee McPherson this time, but the time will come when they will. Judge Hardy in my opinion is guilty of being indiscreet, but nothing more. It is Aimee McPherson and no one else who is to blame for this whole predicament Judge Hardy finds himself in. Now you know why I am testifying at this trial. "I am writing a book of my life. You can believe me when I say that Aimee McPherson plays an important part in that book. The last chapter will not be written until I have settled my score with that woman." Angry, Won't Tell Why Stopping as suddenly as she started, Mrs. Seilaff's expression changed from one of intense concentration to a smile and she relaxed in her chair. "I got a little excited when I talk about this; pardon me," she said. "Tell us what reason you have for such an attitude toward Mrs. (Continued on Page Two)

Suppression of Evidence Charge Against Germans
WASHINGTON, April 12. (U. P.)—Deliberate suppression of evidence relative to the Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J., explosions of 1916 and 1917 was charged to the German government by American Agent Robert W. Bonyne in his rebuttal argument before the mixed claims commission today. The commission has before it the claims of American property owners against the German government for $10,000,000 damages as a result of the explosions, which are alleged to have been the work of German secret agents. Bonyne called on the German agent, Karl von Lewinski, to produce a witness, Paul Koenig, war-time employe of the German government, who previously had been a New York representative of the Hamburg-American line. A notebook found in Koenig's rooms by New York police in December, 1915, contained information declared to connect him with the Black Tom explosion. Most of the documents seized from Koenig, however, were written in cipher. Bonyne demanded that the German government produce the key to the cipher and also reports and documents Koenig is said to have delivered to the German embassy in Washington, as it is believed by the American agent the latter refer to sabotage work in which Koenig was engaged at that time.
