Nogales, Sonora
Is Surrendered

Gen. Consul I. M. Vasquez of Nogales, Ariz., Two truck loads of food and the cash were dispatched. Then the rebels looted about the much needed food.

Consul Vasquez promised the Yaquis that they would not be molested by federal troops.

Leaders Flee
The Yaquis were without a prominent leader late today. General Topete had entered the United States last night after realizing the futility of remaining in Mexico. General Francisco Borquez, commander of Nogales, crossed the boundary today when the Indians got out of control.

He entered the United States shortly after a federal air attack on Nogales, Sonora, in which a rebel bullet landed on the American side of the line and brought forth protests from United States army officers.

Bombs Kill Two
Bombs and machine gun fire from three federal planes took the lives of two persons and caused injuries to two small girls in Nogales, Sonora. Three killed by bombs were Mexicans; one a soldier and the other a civilian. The girls were scorched on the legs by machine gun fire.

American troops remained along the border tonight, helmeted and armed with machine guns. They had established machine gun nests on the roofs of some business buildings and had occupied homes along the boundary.

U. S. Troops on Guard
During the negotiations today the Yaquis assumed a hostile attitude, setting up machine guns within 15 yards of the American soldiers. It was feared that they might prefer American intervention to a battle with federals and start firing.

Whereabouts of General J. G. Escobar, supreme commander of the revolt, could not be learned tonight, although earlier unconfirmed reports said that he had gone to Colonia Morelos, 120 miles south of Agua Prieta, to lead rebel troops there against the federal force of Gen. Juan Almazan, entering Sonora from Chihuahua.

Another totally unconfirmed report said that Agua Prieta, Sonora, returned to federal hands today.

Husband Kills,
Burns Own Wife

then a noisy, violent quarrel soon they were snuffing. Then, Peacock said in his confession, his 29-year-old wife fell limp as he struck her on the head with a revolver, and strangled her. He carried her body to his car outside, wrapped the head in a towel so blood would not stain the cushions and drove until he found the lonely wooded place between Scarsdale and Ardley, where he laid the body on a small stump of underbrush and hurriedly drove back to town.

False Tooth Is Clue
There it lay until last Saturday morning. Peacock said, when he returned with two milk bottles containing kerosene, poured it over the clothing and set fire to the body. The flames had died down and only the pyre of underbrush remained smoldering when a few hours later a youth strolled upon the scene, took one glance and fled horrified.

Peacock was traced by Westchester county authorities from a single clue—a false tooth. Mrs. Alphonse Heinselman, the victim's mother, identified the body late yesterday after reading a description of the dental work, and in a few hours had told investigators of the "temperamental differences" which separated her daughter and son-in-law.

"I Loved My Wife"
Peacock was found late last night in New York and taken to White Plains for questioning. Detectives meanwhile had visited his home in White Plains and found a pair of kerosene-soaked trousers and a dark spot on the floor resembling blood. After holding him all night and confronting him with evidence he could not explain away, District Attorney Frank H. Corne said he obtained a complete confession from Peacock at dawn today.

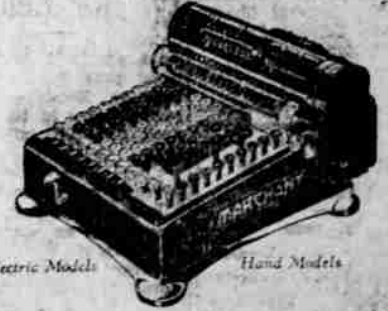

The young man was not unnerfed as officials entered a murder charge against him. "I loved my wife," he said. "Don't let anybody doubt it. I didn't mean to kill her."

Sonora, returned to federal hands today.

Our Second
Opening!

On January 17th of this year The Pelican opened its doors to the public—and gave to Klamath Falls a theatre second to none in the state.

On Saturday, May 4th, with all the interest of an historical event, the Pelican Theatre will introduce to the people of Klamath Falls the invention that has revolutionized the motion picture industry and marvelously enhanced the entertainment value of the screen, the device which is the marvel and wonder of our scientific age, successful talking pictures.

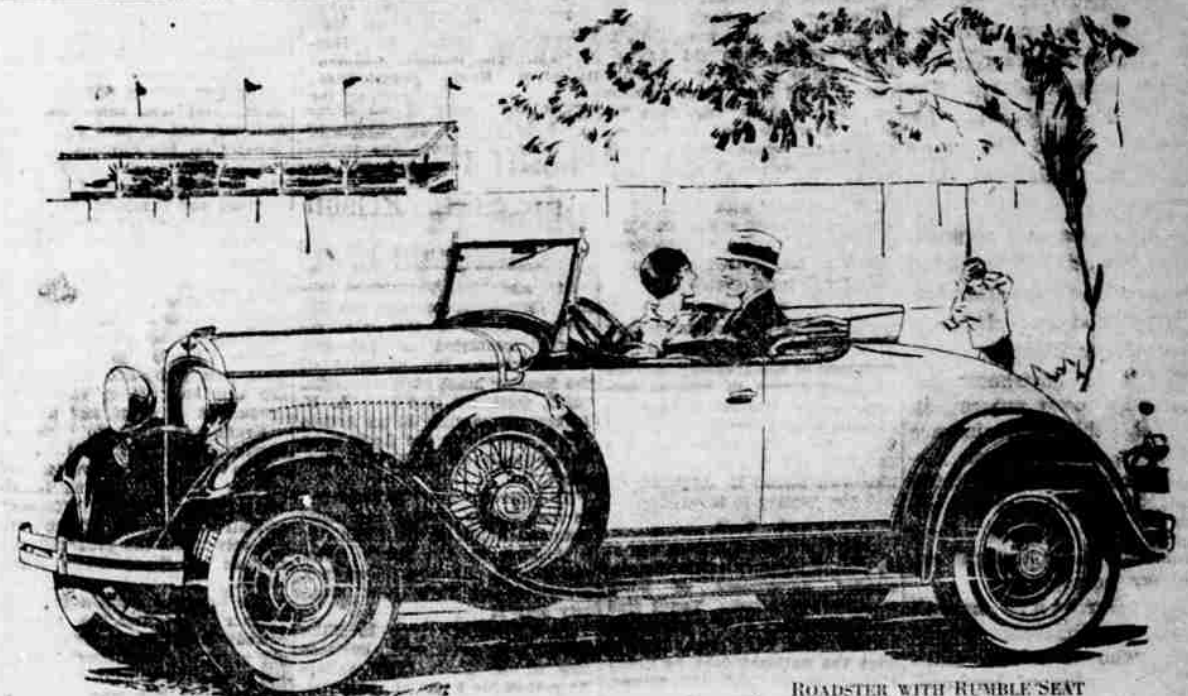

We have been asked why we did not have sound installation before—had we been content with vastly inferior equipment which would have been a disappointment to our patrons and a source of humiliation to ourselves, we could have done so. In order to get the very best we have been compelled to wait until this time, but we now offer with pride to Klamath Falls the finest and most perfect sound and talking installation possible. When you see and hear "IN OLD ARIZONA" on Saturday, Sunday and Monday at our beautiful theatre, you may be assured that you are participating in the finest entertainment now available.

Incidentally, it is also a matter of pride that our first attraction, "IN OLD ARIZONA," is not only 100 per cent talking, but it is also the first all-talking picture to be made outside the sound studios; it was made out of doors and the beautiful scenic effects are real.

The opening of The Pelican Theatre was the result of long and continuous effort—and it was worth it; we now feel that the greatest day that the Pelican will ever know will be next Saturday, May 4th, when we will welcome our many friends to our first all-talking entertainment—

Inevitably Fine

From its very origin, the new Dodge Brothers Six had to be what it actually is—a value beyond parallel or precedent. It was built with the studied care and uncompromising skill that have made the Dodge Brothers name a symbol for dependability. Walter P. Chrysler endowed it with innumerable refinements and more than a score of mechanical betterments. Outstanding among these is the exclusive Mono-piece Body—one of the most important developments of recent years. By a wide and commanding margin, the new Dodge Brothers Six is the greatest value in Dodge Brothers history. EIGHT BODY STYLES, 1915 to 1965 F.O.B. DETROIT. Convenient Terms.
