Hog Stealing Case Is Today

Just who owns four hogs, and why, is the burning question which will be settled, in part, this morning at what gives promise of being rather an amusing justice court hearing.

Dick Reed, former University of Oregon football star, Walter Gibb and Mark Smith are charged with stealing those four hogs.

Reed owns a ranch near Bonanza. A man named Roberts—the complaining witness—leased the ranch. Roberts had some hogs. When time came for him to leave, he counted his hogs and found four missing.

The sheriff's office was called into the case and the hogs were located on the ranch of Walter Gibb.

Reed claims that Roberts damaged his ranch to the extent of $250 and that he took the hogs as part payment.

With these allegations and counter-allegations already made, Justice of the Peace W. B. Barnes will decide whether or not there is cause to refer the matter to the grand jury.

SPOT FOREST FIRES QUICKLY

Federal Men Soon Find Cause of Blaze and Act Accordingly

KLAMATH AGENCY, Ore., May 27 (Special)—Fire prevention and control are arts as practiced by men in the Indian service as well as in the regular forestry department of the government.

While a News reporter was in the office at the Agency yesterday, the telephone rang and John Colvard, lookout on Mt. Callmus, called in, giving the figures, 3, 27, 30, of a smoke at an estimated distance of 30 to 35 miles.

Immediately Allen F. Space, in charge of all fire control work at the Indian agency, clapped his degree finder on his special map, turned it to the degree angle, and by the lookout, drew a line and measured off 35 miles by the map scale and found there should be a fire of some kind near the Pelican Bay logging camp.

A phone call to that point revealed that the lumber company is cleaning away a site for new headquarters and the smoke came from the brush being burned.

Thursday Mt. Callmus reported a fire in the direction of 267 degrees and 15 minutes. L. O. Wright of Mt. Scott got the range at 135 degrees and 40 minutes.

Space drew the required lines on his map and where they intersected he judged the fire to be raging. Again the boys hit the nail exactly on the head, locating the blaze at once.

It was burning near the Buck Williams' place. The nearest fire guards were phoned and they soon appeared on the scene and put the fire out in no time. Since it happened in an area where there is no available timber, the only damage done was to burn up Alex Davis' cowpuncher's bed outfit and spare clothing, leaving him at the mercy of the spring winds.

He had started the fire to cook his dinner over. Leaving it but a few minutes a sudden gust of wind came up and scattered the flames. But the quick work of the fire patrol saved the destructive elements from getting into the huge stand of pine in the Long Prairie unit owned by the Ewauna Lumber company.

Mr. Space stated that putting out the above by only two guards is considered very good work since at present very bad fire weather prevails.

Because of the dry season the relative humidity is low. Since 30 per cent humidity is considered the danger line, the present prevailing humidity which is getting so low as 13 per cent, keeps the fire service in constant fear of a sudden blaze.

The rainfall of six inches this season is only half the normal supply. In the past, however, Mr. Space has managed to keep his fires within a 40-acre area and he is in hopes of doing so this season even though the natural elements are against him.

His work is greatly facilitated by the skill of the lookouts. During 1928 Mt. Callmus spotted each fire accurately during the entire summer season.

When a fire crew is ready to go out they find that other fast workers have been busy getting all necessities ready to take along.

Grub lists are made up in 1, 2, 3, size assortments according to requirements. When a fire broke out last summer, Space phoned Ed Gowen's store at Sprague river, that a major order was needed.

In one-half hour Gowen had the supplies packed for 50 men who had only to grab it and rush on by toward the threatened area.

Spring Salad Suggestion No. 9

Mandarin orange sections, Cucumber (diced fine), Tokay or Malaga Grapes (seeded and skinned), Water Cress... and, of course, French Dressing made with Wesson Oil.

The cleverest hostess the more imaginative and different are her salads. And you'll find, too, that her French Dressing is usually a distinctly individual creation.

Two parts Wesson Oil, one part lemon juice or vinegar, salt and pepper—then whatever strikes your fancy: for instance, a little sugar, ketchup, chopped mint or anything else that suggests itself. Paprika, of course, for color. There are scores of delightful variations to suit your personal taste—any one of which will lead unusual flavor and zest to even your most piquant salad.

Isn't it wise to have a different dressing for every salad? The Wesson Oil recipe book has suggestions for eighteen different kinds of French Dressing. Send for it. Address: The Wesson Oil and Seasoning People, 112 Market Street, San Francisco, California.
