

Thrills—Romance—Humor—Suspense

For Ginger's Sake

by ETHEL HUESTON

IMAGINE a minister's daughter starting a night club! And in a little corn belt town like Red Thrush, Iowa! . . . That's what Ginger Ella Tolliver did. Bored with small town life, impatient at the restrictions placed upon her lively imagination in the church-like atmosphere of Red Thrush, Ginger organized a Junior Country Club where parents, babies and ministers were barred, where joie de vivre became the "younger set's" shibboleth... Whereupon Ginger, after falling in love with a nice young man, was kidnaped and held for ransom and the thrills came thick and fast. . . . "For Ginger's Sake" is a lively story without a dull minute, told with a sense of humor and a keen appreciation of the psychology of that part of young America known as flapper. . . . A story of gay youth from a youthful viewpoint, written by Ethel Hueston.
