Governor Norblad Gives Retiring Talk To State Legislators

BY JAMES F. ROWE
United Press Staff Correspondent

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 12. (UP)—Alvin Walter Norblad, 26th governor of Oregon, today delivered his retiring message to the 26th legislative assembly.

A summary of a year's office as "successor" to the late L. L. Patterson, and recommendations for the lawmakers, were contained in the closely typed 66-page message, the longest ever delivered by a state chief executive. It discussed a wide range of those problems which now confront the national government—tax relief, prison reform, unemployment, public construction and reapportionment.

SHOWS ENTHUSIASM The retiring executive-attorney showed continued enthusiasm and interest in the state's criminal and law code by devoting many pages to this topic. The discussion showed keen interest and intensive study into methods for improvement.

A great absence of uniformity of view with respect to laws providing for those receiving reimbursement from the state for expenses incurred while discharging their duties, was given over the long discussion. Following a summary of self-sustaining commissions and practices in disbursement of fund without supervision, the governor said:

"Does not this reveal conditions in which we have doubtless inadvertently drifted, falling at the time of initial action to visualize the ultimate outcome. Instead of retaining supervision of much of the public money the incalculable loss of the state treasury is being made. Preparation of the budget properly belongs to the executive. . . . that he should at any time be able to secure full and complete information respecting the state's functions. Unless this authority is granted he cannot be held responsible."

RECOMMENDATIONS More than five pages of recommendations for improving administration of justice were set forth. "Some means must be devised whereby larger volumes of business pass through the courts without sacrificing quality of the individual decisions. Improvement in the judicial system might tend to further unsettle rather than subsidize industry."

"If the state is to do anything toward relieving unemployment it must take earliest possible steps toward building institutions. These require, under a most conservative estimate, an outlay of between a million and a half and two million dollars."

AIDS UNEMPLOYMENT Unemployment recognized in recommendations for increased budgets and expenditures in extending highways and building new state institutions. "We are now passing through an era of business depression and stagnation. This is the time when we should be studying and enacting legislation which might tend to further unsettle rather than subsidize industry."

"The state is to do anything toward relieving unemployment it must take earliest possible steps toward building institutions. These require, under a most conservative estimate, an outlay of between a million and a half and two million dollars."

GROWTH SHOWN Growth of 12 state institutions is "startling and precipitous a serious problem," the governor declared. Attention also was given the Ohio prison fire as an example of public negligence, while segregation of old and young criminals was looked upon as a necessity. This could be effected through construction of a reformatory. Examples of Washington, California and New York laws requiring guardians and parents to pay the expense of public charges in institutions were asked both as a relief measure and as measure for obtaining construction funds.

A recommendation that the state borrow funds for four and one-half per cent interest on a $2,000,000 issue of bonds was urged to expedite the state building program as a necessary unemployment relief measure "and a special election to authorize such a bond issue and direct state officers to take up the work as soon as possible, should be the aim of this body."

QUOTES NEW CODE The same provision was asked for the highway departments to "permit more extensive highway operations by sale of bonds thus further relieving unemployment."

Seven rules setting for a new state code for the dairy industry were quoted as a measure to make Oregon "the outstanding dairy commonwealth in the nation."

Change to the old primary election law in September was urged, while revision of the corrupt practices act was recommended to the extent of removing numbers from the names of candidates and regarding an act covering contributions by relative to candidates, said: "Neither make it effective or repeal it."

"Money from the operation of more than 20 boards and commissions for examination fees should be covered to a general fund of the state treasury and made available for governmental expenses the same as money resulting from annual tax levies."

By combining the work of most of these departments much of the expense now credited to clerical work could be reorganized with a great saving to the state, the governor said. "Delivering into the subject further, it had there are no restrictions on limitations of expenditures of the corporation department, insurance department, the fire marshal or real estate commissioner. A comparative study of the budget of these officials for 1931-32 as compared to 1929-30 was made showing an increase of nearly $40,000 for the next year."

FOR CLOSER WATCH These allusions make no reference whatever to the superintendent of banks, secretary of state or public service commission, fish and game department, prohibition administrator or state board of control wherein money is disbursed without biennial scrutiny or approval of the legislature. Expense accounts were not exempt from the state's tax disbursement system. Examination of claims leaves the impression it may have been possible in many instances to have served the state just as efficiently and at the same time practiced economy in the matter of expense in connection with the service performed while it also is revealed there are nearly as many different forms used for expense accounts as there are offices. All officials having public funds entrusted to their care should be placed under adequate surety bond."

ENDORSES LAWS Traffic laws to be proposed by Hal Ross, secretary of state, were endorsed. These concerned drunken drivers, examination and recovery of license by fixing financial responsibility.

State acquisition of federal forest lands was dealt with carefully, Norblad showing himself adverse to taking any definite stand. "There are plainly two sides to this argument and many feel the state will lose anything by taking the lands," I recommend, however, suitable legislation for acquisition of the Siuslaw National forest."

Intimation that a state budget plan for supervision of state accounts and exercise of authority, was made. "Preparation of the budget properly belongs to the executive. . . . that he should at any time be able to secure full and complete information respecting the state's functions. Unless this authority is granted he cannot be held responsible."

RECOMMENDATIONS More than five pages of recommendations for improving administration of justice were set forth. "Some means must be devised whereby larger volumes of business pass through the courts without sacrificing quality of the individual decisions. Improvement in the judicial system might tend to further unsettle rather than subsidize industry."

NEW GOVERNOR STATES PLANS

Retrenchment to reduce the state bonded debt. Legislation to establish standing systems of expenditures for state departments.

Tax on all public power plants, so the future tax problem will not be further complicated by the entry of public agencies in the power business.

FOR CONSOLIDATION Equalization of the tax burden borne by real property. Consolidation of state administrative agencies.

Establishment of a state police system. Repeal of useless and unenforced laws. Establishment of an old-age pension system.

Free textbooks. Scientific survey of the state game and fish resources. Non-partisan judiciary. Declared against salary raids.

FOR HIGHWAYS Continuance of the state highway program with consideration of unemployment problem. Repeal of the millage market road tax.

Legislation allowing construction of tunnels, bridges, roads, etc., by the utility certificate method. (This is generally conceded to be the best method for the proposed Tualatin tunnel under the Portland West Side Hills.)

Re-enactment of the 1921 port law vesting the appointment of members of the port of Portland in the governor.

FOR STATE RATIONING Ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. Legislation to force relatives to pay part of the cost of maintaining state wards—insane, feeble minded, defective, and incurably idiotic.

Interests on all balances of public funds to accrue to the state general fund. That the legislature memorialize congress to reserve funds to the national forest, to the state of Oregon for the erection and maintenance of public buildings.

HONORS JOSEPH The governor reiterated his endorsement in toto of the "Joseph platform" including abolition of the Public Service Commission, free speech, and public development, ownership and distribution of water power without cost to the tax payers. He also devoted a considerable portion of his message to an appreciation of the late Senator Joseph and his works in behalf of the state and its people.

"It was in these selfsame legislative halls that Senator Joseph, for 12 years, so earnestly and eloquently pleaded the cause of the people," the governor said, in his address to the legislature. "He was a man of high character and high integrity. He was a man of high character and high integrity. He was a man of high character and high integrity."

Called "MANDATE" "It was on this same sacred principle that I carried on as an independent candidate for the governorship of the state of Oregon, and I continue my indebtedness to the high office by such an avalanche of votes as absolute vindication of the cause for which Senator Joseph so valiantly fought and sacrificed his life, and as an absolute mandate from the people of the state of Oregon to write these principles and policies into the fundamental law of the state."

"In conclusion I want to make the observation that a state should be as great as its natural resources. Measured by this standard, Oregon should be one of the greatest and most prosperous states in the union, for Oregon has tremendous resources."

"It is rich in agriculture, timber, mineral, fish, game, scenery and water. But, with exception of our water power, all these resources are exhausted and must be protected and fostered."

"Our water power, alone, is perpetual, and Oregon possesses an inexhaustible supply. Water power is the magic key to industry and with our water power developed cheaply and in abundance, Oregon's future greatness and prosperity is assured."

Mr. Adella Gates, teacher in Bond high school, visited Mr. and Mrs. Dick Donajillo Sunday.

HIGH POINTS IN NORBLAD EXIT ADDRESS

1. Avoid legislation tending to further smelt industry. 2. Oregon must take earliest steps to relieve unemployment. 3. The state should have a reformatory to house young, first offenders.

4. A special election early in 1931 should be our object to seek approval of these bonds. (Two million building bonds). 5. Each county should have at least one member in each house.

6. Eliminate politics as much as humanly possible from the judicial department. 7. No matter how earnest and sincere a governor may be all pardons are charged with suspicion.

8. Worthy of every citizen's approval is the fact our highway commission has disbursed since 1917 the astonishing sum of $119,000,000 without even a breath of suspicion or questioned integrity.

9. To avoid confusion with the national highway system let us change the name of the Roosevelt coast highway to "Oregon Coast Highway."

10. I never could see any justification for changing the primary election from September, and I cannot see any now.

11. The matter which with himself in the use of public money is very much more liberal with himself for his expense than is the high-

MILLIONS IN SPECIAL TAXES

Buyers of fire insurance indirectly but actually contribute a vast sum—approximately 30 million dollars annually—in taxes, most of which are of a special nature and in addition to the regular taxes borne by insurance companies. Such taxes are a burden upon the premium of the policyholder, notwithstanding they are collected from the companies.

The original purpose of taxes on the premiums paid by policyholders was to maintain state supervision of the business. However, such supervision now uses but a few cents of each dollar so collected. The balance goes into the general funds of the states.

Add to the Cost of Insurance These special and regular state taxes are factors in the cost of insurance. The opinion of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has been expressed as follows:

" . . . Special state taxes now levied on policyholders through insurance companies should not be considered as a source of general revenue, but should be reduced to the total in each state which will adequately support such state's departmental supervision . . ."
