MRS. THOMAS MICHAEL, Correspondent

AT THE PELICAN

University of Southern California football stars helped in the making of football scenes for "Good News," Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's talkization of the famous musical comedy hit now being shown at the Pelican Theatre.

Edgar MacGregor and Nick Grinde, who directed the picture version of the Broadway hit, recruited football squads from the ranks of the Trojan stars, lining up sides that played as spirited a game as though representing rival colleges.

Many novel camera shots were obtained by mounting camera platforms on a track that paralleled the routes taken by the players in end runs, making forward passes and touchdowns. Other cameras were placed in dug-outs, over which the players charged toward goals.

With the recording of these scenes in sound, many thrilling glimpses of football strategy were obtained, revealing to fans difficult plays exactly as they are made.

Bessie Love, Gus Shy, Mary Lawlor, Cliff Edwards, Lola Lane and Stanley Smith are featured in the cast of the musical movie and the supporting players include Dorothy McNulty, Tom Jackson, Frank McMillan and Billy Taft.

AT THE RAINBOW

As Eddie Burns, the small time hooper in "Big Time," comedy drama Lee Tracy finally wins back the wife whom he deserted for another partner, but before that he wins his audience, Tracy is a newcomer to the screen, but he has been a tremendous success on the stage, notably in "Broadway" and "The Front Page."

Prominent in the cast appearing in support of Tracy are Mae Clarke, another recruit from the New York stage, Daphne Pollard, well known screen comedienne, Josephine Dunan, and the inimitable Stepin Fetchit, colored comedian.

Kenneth Hawks directed this picture which is showing all this week at the Rainbow Theatre.

AT THE PINE TREE

There is probably no greater object of pity than the crook who has been confined in the penitentiary for many years and eventually comes out an old man—too old to start life anew.

Tully Marshall plays such a role in "One Night at Susie's," the First National Vitaphone production now showing at the Pine Tree Theatre.

The world has little use for old men trying to make a start, and as a result, unless such convicts have relatives who will help them, their desire to go straight usually comes to naught. They are forced back into associations with the criminal world—all the world they have known during their intimate in the penitentiary. Otherwise, they drift to the midnight missions and the bread lines, according to sociologists.

Jim Tully, famous hobo author, has pointed out that the kindest people to such down-and-outers

Completion of the Merrill to Malin section of The Bates-California Highway was taken under consideration by the State Highway Commission at their meeting in Portland, Thursday, after delegates from the Klamath county chamber of commerce and Malin representatives urged the commission to give the project favorable consideration, and to complete it in the near future.

are the people of the underworld, who, no matter how vicious their racket against society, have tender hearts for those of their own kind who have met misfortune.

Every so often the world reads of some old-time crook, but recently released from the penitentiary, who deliberately commits some crime in order to get sent back to the only world he knows where he can be partially useful, and where he will have a place to sleep and enough to eat until he dies.

"One Night at Susie's" shows Tully Marshall as such a character, befriended by Helen Ware, who plays the role of Susie, the "fence." Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., play the leading roles in the picture.
