Rescue Ship Sagona Held By Ice Floes; Plane Searches Sea

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 20. (UP)—Most of the survivors of the wrecked sealing ship Viking trekked across the rafting ice around Horse Island today and clambered aboard the rescue ship Sagona only to find themselves almost as badly off as before, with the little ice-breaker jammed in the ice and unable to move.

Only six of the 127 survivors remained on Horse Island, too badly injured to make the hike to the Sagona, four miles over the treacherous, shifting ice-floes. The others made their way to the ship where they were given quarters.

The government dispatched the steamship Fortia this evening with full supplies, in the hope that they can be transferred to the Sagona across the ice when the storm abates. Wind was hoped for to enable the Sagona to make for the open sea.

Another accident in the same locality occurred today. The auxiliary sealing schooner St. William was crushed in the ice 20 miles east of Horse Island during the night and sank. The crew escaped in two dories.

The Eagle, sent to aid in the rescue of the Viking men, sighted the shipwrecked crew of the St. William at daylight. Rescue crews were sent out and all brought safely on board the Eagle.

ST. JOHNS, March 20. (UP)—Three airmen on a rescue mission over the treacherous ice-floes off the northeastern coast of Newfoundland, passed here tonight in their flight into the north to look for missing men of the wrecked sealing ship Viking. They plan to continue early in the morning, proceeding to Horse Island, by way of St. John's, N. F.

Herrat Balchee, hero of numerous perilous adventures of the air, piloted the huge Sikorsky amphibian rescue plane here from Boston. He was accompanied by Randy Enlow, Roosevelt Field, N. Y., flier, as co-pilot, and Merlan C. Cooper, representative in behalf of Dr. Lewis Frittsell of New York, father of Varick Frittsell, young explorer among the men lost when the Viking was blown up and burned last Sunday night off Horse Island.

HOMESTEADS GIVEN VETS

$2,000 to $15,000 with many having more than $10,000.

PRIZES SETTLED

"We consider that a high type of settlers has been secured for the land," Hayden said. He also stated that with the present competition for homesteads an applicant must have considerable capital and experience to be successful.

There are now 276 homesteaders in the Tule Lake reclaimed area, and 50 or 60 more homesteads will be opened this fall and as many more possible will be opened each year hereafter.

"The present development is very satisfactory and practically all lands are in cultivation which have been opened to entry," the superintendent stated.

the argument—that Jack Dempsey, if you want to put it that way, has more intelligence than I have."

CAN "WHITE WELL"

Dreiser said that he has known Lewis since 1904, and that he really believes Lewis can "write well."

"I knew him when he was a reader with Stokes," the noted novelist said, "and, as a matter of fact, I used to give him a little advice on occasions. I don't think he really dislikes me. I know I don't dislike him. I don't think he was in his right mind last night."

Dreiser said that when Lewis made certain remarks about him during his speech at the dinner last night, "I didn't pay much attention to him." A man who has been writing novels as long as he has, the author suggested, has to put up with a lot of adverse comment.

MET IN HALL

"I went out into the hall," he said, "and was ready to go home. I ran him out of there. He started making unseemly remarks and calling me names. He kept squawking about it and I told him to act his age. He continued his wild talk, so I let him have one."

"Well, about that time, someone came up. I think it was Will Lengel, and told me I was wanted on the telephone. I told Lewis that I was going to answer the call, but that if he had anything to say, he should say it now."

CHURCHES FOR BIRTH CONTROL

said frankly, in an inserted summary, that they recognized their recommendation of abstinence instead of birth control as "a counsel of perfection."

The Rev. Worth M. Tippy, executive secretary of the church council's social service commission, said in a statement accompanying the report that it was the result of a "continuous study of problems of marriage and the home, extending over a period of years."

Physicians, psychologists and social scientists, he said, had given counsel regarding its preparation.

NEARLY RECOGNIZED

In its opening paragraph the report said that use of contraceptives was "nearing the status of a recognized procedure," and that the public was entitled to church guidance regarding it. Marital love, it was said, could not be regarded solely as a means of procreation, but as a supreme expression of affection and comradeship.

The hazards of pregnancy in certain circumstances, it was said, might be avoided by the use of economic conditions also enter into the question, it was added, and it was pointed out that very large families tended to "produce poverty, to endanger the health and stability of the family, to limit the educational opportunities of the children, to overstrain the mother and to take from her her own chance of a life larger than the routine of her home."

NEED IN SEEN

Furthermore, it was said, the problem of over-population, while not immediate, was so far-reaching that it was felt that this country was concerned, must be taken into consideration.

"As to the necessity, therefore," the report continued, "for some form of effective control of the size of the family and spacing of children and consequently of control of conception, there can be no question. It is recognized by all churches and all physicians."

FORMS TOLD

"There is general agreement also that sex union between husband and wife as an expression of mutual affection, without relation to procreation, is right. This is recognized by the scriptures, by all branches of the Christian church, by social and medical science, and by the good sense and idealism of mankind."

"As to the method of control of conception, two ways are possible. One is the use of contraceptives, or methods other than abstinence, which may be classified as such. The other is self-control or abstinence for longer or shorter periods of time. Both may be considered as forms of birth control."

"VALID AND MORAL"

"Here the report reviewed the differing views, medical and social as well as religious, regarding use of contraceptives. But whatever the views, it was emphasized, there should be no effort to impose restrictions legally or by other means of coercion against the use of contraceptives or the dissemination of information regarding them.

"To this point in the report, it was said, the committee agreed. Then follows the majority view—for the crime. Mowry said that at the time Mrs. Bowles met her death, there were only three persons in Miss Louck's apartment—Bowles, Mrs. Bowles and Miss Loucks.

"Within 10 minutes from the time Mr. Bowles got there," Mowry said, "his wife was stabbed in Miss Louck's apartment with a knife of Miss Loucks. If she didn't commit suicide, someone killed her."

Mowry also discussed the many incriminating circumstances, on which the state has built its case, and all of which had been cited before—when the state called its witnesses and presented its evidence.

TOO MUCH WORK

Mose was taking examination for letter carrier. The examiner asked him the question: "What is the distance from the earth to the sun?"

"Lawdy me!" exclaimed Mose. "If you're gwine to put me on that route Ah's resignin' right now!"—Pathfinder.

"That the careful and restrained use of contraceptives by married people is valid and moral"—and the minority view.

At The Theatres

AT THE NEW VOX

The popularity of the "Western" or outdoor romance will not diminish... not as long as they are produced as well as "Shadow Ranch," the current Columbia All-talking feature with Buck Jones which holds the screen at the New Theatre.

It would be difficult to imagine a more likeable, wholesome character than Sim Baldwin, the cow-puncher who quits his job and rides many hard miles at the call of a friend in need. Finding his friend murdered, Sim takes up the task his pal had left undone—fighting to save a girl's property from the conniving schemes of a scoundrel, thrilling the audience with a barrage of stunts, fights and amazing horsemanship.

There is no "hedging" the cow-puncher. He backs up his argument with both fists and very often with a "six-gun."

Then there is the horse, "Silver," one of the most beautiful and intelligent animals to grace the silver screen. Buck Jones' Arabian stallion is alone worth going miles to see.

Columbia pictures have surrounded the star with a notable cast. Marguerite De La Motte plays the feminine leading role with a charm and ability, and Kate Price offers one of her typical comedy characters in her inimitable style. Frank Rice, Al Smith, Bob McKenzie and the former aerial star, Ben Wilson all render excellent support under the direction of Louis King.

employer; payment according to ability to learn; for future and present employment of the worker; creation of a commission to regulate and establish rules for both parties.

APPRENTICE CONTRACT

A CONTRACT entered into by the employer and apprentice must among other requirements, set for the wage, period of employment—usually four years—and show approval of parents and the commission, it was provided.

FORMERLY an apprentice on becoming of age would be free of a contract entered into when a minor. The new law secures these contracts beyond such a period with equal benefit to both parties.

PROVIDE COMMISSION

AN APPRENTICESHIP commission was provided. It will be composed of C. A. Howard, state superintendent of public instruction; C. H. Gram, state labor commissioner; a member of the state industrial accident commission. The latter likely will be W. H. Fitzgerald, it was indicated. He will be selected by the governor.

NON-SALARIED secretary will be selected by the commission. As most of the work must be co-ordinated with the vocational education department duties, Adams appeared the likely choice for this position.

SUB-COMMISSIONS will be established throughout the state to approve contracts and provide local supervision, Adams said.
