the wheel, gave his special agent his instructions.

Within two hours the dapperly-dressed Moley and his aide, Arthur E. Mullen Jr., were winging away from the Roosevelt fleet, en route for New York, where the departure will be made tomorrow for London.

Moley to Carry Word After his visit with Mr. Roosevelt aboard the Amerjack II, Mr. Moley returned to the destroyer Ellis, where Stephen T. Early, a secretary of the president issued the following statement:

"Assistant Secretary Moley is sailing tomorrow for London at the request of the president. He will act in a sense as a messenger or liaison officer, giving the American delegates first hand information of the various developments, congressional, in this country since the designation left and conveying the president's views of these developments given the delegation before they sailed.

"Secretary Moley will stay in London about a week, and will return to give the president full information on the conference, etc., up to that time.

"The purpose of the conference with the president was to advise him in detail of developments transpiring at the economic conference in London since the president left Washington last Friday.

"At the conclusion of his report to the president Secretary Moley was given final instructions. "Stephen T. Early."

France May Seek To End Conclave; Pittman Supported

(Continued from Page One) erment will not return to the gold standard until it is sure that standard will work.

The resolution was before the sub-committee on permanent monetary affairs. There was an interesting development when, through the intercession of Senator Pittman, James P. Warburg, who is advising the Americans in technical matters, was granted the courtesy of speaking from the floor although he is not a member of the committee.

It was Mr. Warburg who told the committee bluntly that America would not accept the gold standard again until certain that it was workable.

Mr. Warburg's declaration presumably was drawn out by the fact that France and other gold bloc nations had immediately pronounced on one clause of the Pittman resolution as giving them a chance to further their drive to force America to revert to the gold standard and to stabilize exchange.

This is clause two, which provides "that gold should be re-established as the international measure of exchange values."

Viscount Hailsham of Great Britain—a government which takes an attitude similar to that of America regarding the return to gold—intervened and asked that this clause be amended to leave it to each country to determine "time and parity" in connection with going back to gold.

Rock Creek ROCK CREEK—Posterity as well as sportsmen of today will benefit by the planting of quantities of aquatic tubers, bulbs and seeds which is being completed this week on the marshes of Upper Klamath lake by John A. Perl, with the assistance of the caretaker of Harriman lodge.

The seeding, which is expected to provide food in the future for thousands of ducks and geese in this district was proposed by Mr. Perl who financed the venture and spent many hours in proper placing of the vegetation.

AMUSEMENTS

Pelican—Now playing, Chas. Bickford, Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in "Song of the Eagle."

Pine Tree—Now playing, Dickie Moore and Irving Pichel in "Oliver Twist."

Vox—Now playing, John Ethel and Lionel Barrymore, in "Rasputin and the Empress."

PELICAN

CHARLES BICKFORD

After 15 years of shackled liberty America rallied to the muffled pleadings of a few far-sighted thinkers, and the result has been the new 1933 model Declaration of Independence. Back from France, the remnants of a million of her finest boys have risen to strike out the menace of a much juggled law that has bred crime, crippled industry, and virtually destroyed much of the fineness of American social life. This revolution of thought is the substance of probably the most dynamic screen story of today's thrilling national reorganization, "Song of the Eagle."

"Song of the Eagle" is a Paramount production, featuring one of the strongest casts possible to organize for a picture of this kind. Charles Bickford plays the role of an honest beer wagon driver, later becoming a notorious racketeer and bootlegger baron. Richard Arlen does splendid work as the leader of the doughboys who rise against the criminal influence back of their strangled liberty. Louise Dresser, Jean Hersholt, Mary Brian, Andy Devine and George E. Stone are the other featured players.

Strong in story and reflecting the new American thought, "Song of the Eagle," now playing at the Pelican theatre, promises Klamath Falls a thrilling account of the "new deal."

PINE TREE

Charles Dickens gave us a story that becomes dearer to the world with each year of its undying popularity. A classic it is, because it is built so close around the heart of all humanity, a child. That story is "Oliver Twist," and its advent to the realm of screen masterpieces is heralded with much enthusiasm by grown-ups and children alike.

"Oliver Twist" is now playing at the Pine Tree theatre, with America's little brother, Dickie Moore, playing the part of the immortal child character so dear to our hearts. Irving Pichel and William Boyd deliver splendid performances in the leading grown-up roles.

VOX

The most famous brothers on the screen staged one of the most spirited fight scenes ever filmed—and neither had so much as a scratch as a result of the encounter.

John and Lionel Barrymore, as Prince Chegodieff and Rasputin, threw each other off landings, figured in a knock-down and drag-out in a cellar, and even went through a glass window, as thrills for "Rasputin and the Empress." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of the fall of the Romanoffs, now playing at the Vox theatre. But with years of experience in the art of "picture fighting," they produced a bloodless battle that on the screen looks terrific.

The sequence is that leading up to the death of Rasputin in the drama of Russia co-starring John, Ethel and Lionel Barrymore for the first time. John and Lionel learned "picture fighting" and the art of "pulling punches" in the days of silent pictures. In the current talkie era, the art stands them in good stead.

Ethel Barrymore plays the czarina in "Rasputin and the Empress."

relating system by providing adequate water facilities, lateral canals and other distributive sections so that production costs would be lowered on irrigated acreage and self-subsistence farming provided to take care of "the many hundreds who, like pioneers, are coming back to the land."

Dana made clear that any additional production brought about through strengthening irrigation service and completing its construction program would not add to farm surplus as all production for reclamation projects was consumed in the immediate area.

Unemployed Active In Marion County SALEM, June 20, (AP)—Making "demands" and not mere "requests," pickets from "unemployed council" throughout Marion county paraded posters today after camping in the court house yard here last night.

The "demands" were cash relief, no forced labor, 50 cents an hour for relief work, freeing of Max Ferrar who is serving a six months term for assault and battery on a relief official here, permission to visit Ferrar in jail, free fuel, free dental and medical attention, restraint of utilities from shutting off gas, water and lights of the unemployed and removal of county relief activities from the Red Cross.

GRANGERS RETURN FROM CONVENTION

Eighteen Klamath county Pomona grange members from nine of the 12 subordinate granges in the county returned the first of the week from the state grange meeting at Pendleton.

Registration at the meeting totaled 1,500 with 447 registered delegates.

One of the primary resolutions passed at the meeting was one opposing the sales tax, according to H. J. Tiehnor, who represented the Olene grange.

State Master Ray Gill definitely announced that he would not be in the gubernatorial race, Tiehnor stated.

"All banks in Pendleton are closed but one was kind enough to open and pay approximately $6,200 mileage fees to grangers attending the meeting," the Olene granger said.

company yards, factory and woods operations. Weyerhaeuser Timber company, the largest lumber firm in the county, is operating with one eight-hour shift throughout the entire plant with an employment list of about $90.

Shaw-Bertram Lumber company is operating one shift in the box factory and two eight-hour shifts in the sawmill. Approximately 300 men are employed at the plant and in the woods.

Capacity Watched. The Pelican Bay Lumber company has continued operations in the box factory and planing mill with one shift in each. With the sawmill opening Tuesday morning approximately 320 men are employed by the company, including those in the woods.

Because of investments and overhead in operating the lumbering plants more than fifty present small running capacity is necessary to continue operations on a profitable basis for any length of time. The majority of the shifts running at the present time are but little different from operations which many of the companies have continued throughout the year to hold and prepare for orders.

Several smaller planing mills and factories are operating under similar conditions as those contacted, with an estimated total employment list of a few hundred.

some question whether the league proposal will be put on the ballot.

T. H. Gillenwaters, district attorney, and John Irwin, president of the league were in conference Tuesday afternoon and expected to iron the trouble out. The petitioners have 800 names, believed by Irwin to be the necessary number. County officials declared approximately 1200 were necessary according to Oregon law.

Judge Grizzle expressed the hopes that both proposals could be placed on the ballot so county residents would have a satisfactory choice concerning the armory fund.

Tuesday was the final day for placing measures on the ballot, according to the county clerk's office. Election notices and ballots will be sent to the printers Wednesday.

Governor Bawls Out Officers for Rodeo Date Mixup

SALEM, June 20. (UP)—Criticizing the conflict of dates in the "Stampede" at the state fair grounds and the Molalla Buckaroo as an "inexcusable blunder," Governor Julius Meier late today ordered Max Gehlar, state fair director, to confer with Molalla officials and settle differences.

Monday a party of Molalla residents went to Salem to see the governor and Gehlar and was unable to contact either official. The charged they were being dodged.

The Salem and Molalla rodeos are both being scheduled for the July 4 holidays.

Governor Meier declared the entertainment at the state fair grounds was not intended to be a state-wide attraction. He characterized as a mistake circulation of advertising dodgers for it in the Molalla territory.

zation is sympathetic, but the Australians are fearful of political repercussions if an effort is made to cut acreage.

Details Undisclosed The Australians are reported to have proposed a method of controlling exports and "denaturalizing" the surplus. It is assumed that under his plan alcohol would be made from grain in excess of domestic requirements and the export quota, and would be used as fuel. The details, however, have been withheld.

In some quarters it was felt that the Australian suggestion was unsatisfactory in view of the disastrous Brazilian efforts to restrict coffee exports without restricting acreage, resulting in the burning of the surplus as locomotive fuel and its destruction by various methods.

HELD ON NON-SUPPORT Owen L. King was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Ross Brown Tuesday morning and lodged in the county jail on a charge of non-support. The complaint was filed with Justice of the Peace W. B. Barnes.

PYROIL ACTION IS SHOWN BY TESTS

One of the most unusual demonstrations in which car owners will be interested was the three-hour and 30-minute running of a Ford delivery, model 4, Tuesday, after the crankcase had been completely drained of lubrication.

The demonstration was sponsored by William Ousley of the Klamath Pyroil agency at 320 South Sixth, and the Klamath Auto Dealers association.

At 10:30 Tuesday morning after oil had been drained from the crankcase before witnesses, the car was filled with gasoline treated with Pyroil at the Monarch service station. With the plug left from the crankcase the car was run through the city streets and county roads until 2:25 p. m., when it was taken to the Baleser Motor company and the motor taken down for inspection.

The motor was in perfect condition and showed no scoring or injury.

Before the car started its dry run, it was filled with Pyroil-treated motor lubricant and run for 30 minutes. The Pyroil, which contains a liquid graphite and penetrates any filter, filled the pores of the pistons and cylinders, forming a tough skin that was virtually friction-proof and unharmed by heat.

On the last lap before being taken to the garage where the engine was opened, the car was run up North Sixth street hill carrying four passengers.

The demonstration was not put on to show how long a car could run without oil, but to show the protection Pyroil gives when used in the motor. Frank Hull, Medford distributor declared.

A small amount of Pyroil used in gasoline and motor oil is recommended for the general running of a car.

The film coating within the engine protects the life and vibration of the motor, as shown by the demonstration Tuesday.
