

WOODSMEN TAKEN TO COUNTY CAMP

Seventeen experienced woodsmen were taken to the Lake o' the Woods civilian conservation camp from Klamath Falls Friday morning and six more were called to the camp stationed in the Deschutes national forest.

Those taken to Lake o' the Woods were the second list called from Klamath Falls to that camp. Twenty others from here have been working on roads and preparing the camp for the past two weeks.

The six called to Deschutes forest are to report at Bend, Monday morning at 9 o'clock for examinations. Practically all are residents of the northern part of the county and are the first of the quota from Klamath county for that forest.

The six called are: R. C. Ayers, George Englebret, H. A. Hobson, A. C. Nagle, Tom Payton.

The 17 who left Friday morning for Lake o' the Woods were: Roger Babcock, Jimmie Beavers, Richard Bornhouse, Frank Cheseb, Darrell H. Cover, Dave Kilgore, Alex Howill, Shelley Kilgore, Bob Laursen, John McCarthy, Bert Munson, Chas. T. Price, John Quibell, Samuel G. Simpson, P. M. Snider, A. A. Venise, C. D. Williams.

Borden Products Packed in Klamath-Made Wooden Boxes

The accompanying picture shows how one big manufacturer is co-operating with the "ship in wooden boxes" campaign. The display, in the window of Johnson's grocer, is by the Borden company, and shows all its products packed in Klamath-made wooden boxes.

The Borden company is proud of the quality of its products, which are Borden's Eagle Brand condensed milk and Borden's evaporated milk, and wants to insure that quality clear through to the consumer," says R. E. Soper, district salesman for the Borden company. "So we pack our products in wooden boxes, which keep them in far better condition than the fiber box. In the manufacture of these boxes, about 750,000 feet of lumber per year are used. The milk shown in this display, incidentally, is also an Oregon product, being made in Albany."

The gentlemen providing the background for the picture are, left: Earl C. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Klamath county chamber of commerce; Lee Jacobs, manager of the Klamath Falls branch Mason, Ehrman & Co.; Joseph Shuss, of Johnson's grocer; Right: R. E. Soper, district salesman for the Borden company; W. H. Nuss, manager of the Klamath Falls branch of the Western States Grocery company; Frank Jenkins, editor of the Herald and News.

"It is our desire to promote mutual confidence between our empire and all other powers and make known the justice of its cause through the world."

James Inspects Bieber Terminal

BIEBER, Calif.—Arthur Curtis James, chairman of the Western Pacific board and large stockholder of that road and the Great Northern, spent a quarter hour Monday in Bieber railroad terminal, where a year and a half ago he drove a golden spike at the celebration that marked the joining of their new extensions.

His traveling abode, a Burlington railroad car, was transferred here from a Western Pacific to a Great Northern special train, and James departed northward at noon with President W. P. Keenan and other executives of the Great Northern, who came down from Oregon Monday and met him here.

Japanese Emperor Wants Friendship With United States

state that the emperor did evidence a clear understanding of and a keen interest in the subject of Japanese-American friendship and good will, present and future. He declared the subject one on which his interest constantly was focussed because of his belief that the maintenance of a Japanese-American understanding and good will is bound to have a powerful and benign effect on the peace of the world.

Emperor Earnest

The cordial earnestness of his manner and the simplicity and directness of his statements carried an inescapable ring of sincerity and conveyed very definitely the suggestion that the wave of a much more friendly feeling toward the United States, now evident throughout Japan, is also reflected in the imperial palace.

Our meeting occurred in the Phoenix hall, formal audience chamber, which is a relatively small but gorgeously lacquered room, hung with tapestries but devoid of furniture, except for the emperor's chair of red lacquer, set between two ancient cloisonne vases of huge proportions.

The emperor wore the simple khaki uniform of a generalissimo, a service cap tucked under his left arm and his left hand resting on the hilt of his sword.

Good Old Handshake

As introduced he extended his right hand in western fashion for a firm handshake, with all the vigor and warmth of one accustomed to professional greetings. A pleasant smile occasionally punctuated his remarks—a smile which did much to take the chill from the otherwise icy formality of a ritualistic presentation.

Throughout our conversation, a similar cordiality characterized the words of the interpreter, but the bowed faces of the two chamberlains behind his majesty remained completely without expression. Outside the chamber entrance, other somberly clad functionaries maintained equally blank faces, as though no word of the conversation penetrated their understanding. Throughout our exchanges it was obvious that, while he spoke only in Japanese, his majesty is conversant with English.

Replying to one of his statements relative to his deep interest in the development of a close understanding and mutual faith between our countries, I remarked that I had come to the far east in the hope of being better able, as a journalist, to contribute to his objective. He nodded in smiling approval and began his next remark, relative to my visit to Manchoukuo, without awaiting the interpreter's translation.

At the conclusion of the audience, his majesty, injecting momentarily a purely personal note into his remarks, again shook hands. Then, resuming the austere formality prescribed for imperial audiences, he stood rigid while first I, then the ambassador, backed out of the chamber.

As we left, I was given a copy of the latest imperial rescript, in which the emperor said: "The advancement of international peace is what, as evermore, we desire and our attitude towards enterprises of peace shall sustain no charge. By uniting the League of Nations and embarking on a course of its own, our empire does not

A baseball diamond is being completed on a meadow near the camp. Equipment for the camp team will be furnished by the government.

Three Arrested

Believing that their status as government workmen made a fishing license unnecessary, three Portland youths were arrested last week by Ranger Leyva for fishing in the Silver Lake reservoir without a license. The men pleaded ignorance of the laws during an informal trial held at this camp. They were released upon their promise to buy a fishing license for $3 on their first pay day, and as an added punishment were sentenced to serve as kitchen police during the Fourth of July holidays.

The kitchen police are chosen alphabetically to do the manual work of the kitchen; peeling vegetables, scrubbing pots and pans, carrying water, etc. Formerly all K. P.'s were chosen day by day, but six men, including Carl Emery of Klamath Falls have volunteered to remain on K. P. with Saturday and Sunday off. Now the men are chosen for week-end work only.

Potato Shortage Viewed in State

C. A. Henderson, improves the outlook for the local potato crop to a marked degree, for the reason that the Klamath Basin produces only late crop potatoes.

The old crop is 100 per cent sold, Henderson stated, and local dealers are shipping in potatoes at present.

With the early crop of potatoes nearly exhausted in outside markets, and the medium early crop going on the market, the forecast for a big demand on late crop spuds is excellent.

Two Modoc Mills Now in Operation

ALTURAS, Calif.—The only two sawmills to actually commence logging operations this season so far in this section are the Likely Lumber company, located near Likely, and the Cron Mill near Davis Creek.

Both plants, which are operated by about 20 men each, will cut from two to three million feet of lumber during the present season. The Cron mill will be operated as a subsidiary to the Crane Creek Lumber company, which will not operate its main plant during the present season. The buildings of the Crane Creek Lumber company are occupied by a full company of the conservation corps personnel.

Congregationalists Visit Church Here

The following officers of the Congregational conference of Oregon were visitors at the Community Congregational church this week: Rev. C. H. Harrison, D.D., of Portland, Rev. Hugh Lovell of Portland, Rev. E. A. Allen of St. Helena, Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Dungan of Portland. They spent the time in conference with the minister of the church, Rev. T. Davis Preston, and officers of the church.

A public meeting and dinner was held at the church on Tuesday at which all the visitors spoke expressing their surprise and gratification at the progress of the work. The speeches were replied to by Theodore Case, senior deacon of the church, who thanked the visitors for their visit and the conference for the interest and generous support given to the work. Rev. Preston, who presided, outlined the development of the work under his administration and indicated that the prospect three years ago, when he came did not look very encouraging. The visitors were interested to make a tour of the city including the centers where the recreational program is being carried on. The delegation, with Rev. Preston, went to Ashland where a similar visit was made to the Congregational church.

High, Muddy Water Retards Angling

ALTURAS, Calif.—Few limits of fish have been taken from streams and lakes here during the past couple of weeks. Warm weather has raised the streams and muddied them so that fly fishing is not yet good, although some fairly good catches have been made with bait.

Local Isaak Waltons claim that trout fishing will be much better from now on, since the spring was three weeks later than the average year. Fish are just beginning to bite at the higher elevations which have been covered with snow until the past 10 days.

The heaviest planting of fish fry in years has just been completed here by the state division of fish and game.

GOEHRING SPEAKS AT ROTARY LUNCH

A. G. Goehring, local manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company, was the principal speaker at the regular Friday meeting of the Rotary club at the Pelican grill. Goehring's subject was "Telephone Facts." George Ford presided as chairman of the luncheon.

"Telephone prices do not fluctuate as do those of common commodities used by the public," stated Goehring in his talk, "because there are no possibilities of turnover in a telephone plant investment and no chance of saving by shut-down of either part or the whole of any particular operating unit. Telephone prices are limited by cost, and there is really no such thing as guaranteed increases in the company's investments." Goehring declared.

"Expenses of the company have been cut to the bone by the co-operation of every official and employee," continued Goehring, "but in spite of this fact, loss of business has overwhelmed these savings until the earnings of the telephone company in Oregon in 1933 will not exceed one and one-half per cent.

"An analysis of the business has proven that reduction in the price of service would not result in increased usage," concluded Goehring, "and even a small cut in rates which would mean but a tittle to the average customer, would mean ruin to the business."

U. S. Preparing to Introduce Program On Tariff Cutting of import quotas, as suggested by France.

The French, as reported by the United Press Paris bureau several days ago, plan to continue their import quotas after July 1, when the current second quarter of 1933 expires. The chamber of deputies also is planning to increase tariffs on 100 or more specific articles as of that date, these dispatches said.

Secretary Hull's tariff plans were made known immediately, and a specific program to show in detail how tariff cuts can be worked out is now under minute study by his delegation members and experts. It was revealed.

The American stand for tariff cuts gained support today, when Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain asserted the major powers at the conference had turned their backs, at least momentarily, on any program of temporary currency stabilization.

perleeneed Indian officer, and Lou Chester, Klamath Indian of Beatty, were employed by Crawford to fill the vacancies. Dave Chocknot, Indian, who has been employed as special agent at Beatty, may be replaced, Crawford stated.

The superintendent declared the main reason for the change was caused by numerous liquor violations among the Indians. Several other positions on the reservation will be abolished within the next few days for economy purposes, Crawford announced. The nature of the positions to be cut were not revealed although the superintendent declared it would be made possible by the halt of timber cutting operations.

OBITUARY

JAMES A. BAMFORD

James A. Bamford, a native of Ireland, passed away in this city Friday evening following a brief illness. During the World War, Mr. Bamford served in the United States Army. He was a member of Hillsboro lodge Free and Accepted Masons. The remains are at the Klamath funeral home, 925 High street, where friends may call. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

clared a restraining order would probably be issued as a result of the injunction if properly supported.

Truck operators attending the meeting, several for the first time, became greatly concerned upon receiving information from Anderson concerning what would be required under the new system.

Officers of the local organization elected at the meeting last week are Frank Hamblett, president; C. D. Long, vice president; Calvin Peyton, secretary-treasurer and an executive board composed of the officers with Elmer Halsiger and Ed Osterdorf.

HERE'S OTHER SIDE

PORTLAND, June 23. (UP)—If Oregon truckmen win their fight against the new truck fee schedule, the state highway commission will have a shortage of $300,000 to $400,000, Leslie M. Scott, chairman of the commission, said in a statement tonight.

"The highway commission took no hand in the legislation over fees for motor cars and trucks," he said. "Its members and engineers merely stated the economy revenue needs and supplied the legislators information that was asked for."

"The new and higher truck fees are designed by the legislature to make up part of the revenue shrinkage due to the $5 automobile license."

the historic Indian war battle-grounds.

The caravan will leave the chamber of commerce office Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. Tule Lake residents are asked to meet the caravan at the Stone bridge on Lost River at 9 o'clock.

Those expecting to make the trip should equip themselves with water and food for one meal. Captain Applegate said he had received reports that roads were in fair condition.

Anyone wishing to join the Sunday caravan is requested to call Captain Applegate at 331-H or the chamber of commerce.
