LUMBER FIRMS IN WASHINGTON HIRE WORKMEN

SEATTLE, July 8. (AP)—The largest number of lumber orders for any week in more than two years, coupled with an increase in production over the previous period of approximately 10,000,000 feet, today showed the increasingly strong position of the Washington state lumber industry. A total of 141 mills reported to the West Coast Lumbermen's association producing 114,166,159 board feet of lumber for the week ending July 1. This was 8.9 per cent more than the cut of the previous week, and approximately 20,000,000 more than for the preceding week. 6,000 Go To Work. Such an increase, the association said, reflects an added employment of at least 6,000 men in logging camps and sawmills in the past two weeks. On June 3 also, only 119 mills were operating, and on March 1, only 96. The week's orders of 182 mills, amounting to 131,949,553 feet, the association said, broke all records for this year, last year, and with the exception of one week, all records for 1931. In addition, lumber sold but not delivered, unfilled orders, are now 45.95 per cent of the lumber in stock, the largest ratio since during the summer of 1929. The association described the position of the industry as "strong," but added a note of warning. "Undoubtedly a considerable amount of the present buying is to anticipate the proposed lumber codes," it said. "Unless consumption through building is increased this summer, a setback may be expected by the industry when the codes become effective."
