This drive for subscriptions is the first and last the band will ask, the committee tells us. The amount required is small; the functions of a band numerous.

These musicians have volunteered their services willingly for all occasions. The band may be placed on the city budget next year, but until then it must depend upon the public subscription. The chamber of commerce office will receive any donations for this movement.

A New Responsibility of Business Leaders

ONE of the fortunate developments of the last few years is that we are able nowadays to look an extremely radical idea in the face without getting the jitters.

A case in point is the suggestion which Donald Richberg dropped before the Merchant Association of New York in his recent speech there—the suggestion that unless the directors and executives of big business recognize their social responsibilities, and act on them, they will presently be elected by the general public and not by the several stockholders.

Here is a notion which would have earned a man the indelible label of "bolshhevik" if it had been voiced as recently as six months ago. Today we are able to look at it calmly and to see that there is a lot of good sense in it.

It comes down, that is to say, to this: We are awakening to the fact that the man who directs a large industry occupies a position of public trust just as much as does the politician who has been elected senator, judge or governor.

Accepting that simple fact carries us farther, perhaps, away from the philosophy of rugged individualism than any other thing that has happened to us.

The business executive is answerable first of all, to his stockholders. Their money is in his keeping; it's up to him to give them a return on it, and if he fails they quite properly will remove him. He is answerable, too, in a less direct way, to his employees. To be sure, they can't get at him if he fails them. But their jobs, their bread and butter, their chances to do something with their lives, rest entirely on him.

To these allied responsibilities we are now seeing the necessity of adding a third—responsibility to the public at large.

What the industrial executive does affects the whole country sooner or later. We are in his hands, and if he is a fumbling incompetent we are apt to get dropped. Is it after all, so far-fetched to suggest that we ought to be able to exercise some control over him?

The incompetent business man is just as much a parasite on society as the incompetent politician, and society ought to have the power to dispose of him. It would have been the height of radicalism to say that a year or so ago; today it is nothing but plain common sense.

"I wrote it because I need the cash," says Senator Huey Long, referring to his new autobiography. Apparently, here is a man who wants very little credit for what he has done in life.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
The Inside Story From The Capital
 By PAUL MALLON
 (Copyright, 1933, by Paul Mallon)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—No one but little Red Riding Hood will be fooled by the innocent look of the Wall Street wolves these days. They have not mended their ways.

After all the hullabaloo raised over the J. P. Morgan list, a certain prominent private banking house (not the Morgans) has done the same thing again.

The house recently issued a new stock in an eastern distillery financing scheme. It offered blocks of the stock privately to a preferred list of customers. The opening public sale on the stock exchange later was about 150 per cent higher.

Private Lists

That shows clearly how much the average Wall Street is afraid of the senate investigators. That does not impress experienced observers very much. The White House has denied several things which later proved to be correct. Mr. Woodin has been away from his job for a month now. He telephones his office occasionally. There is no particular reason for him to be here before the new recovery program begins to need cash.

The treasury is coughing along on a neat margin. However, he is the only prominent official to have such an extended vacation.

The supposition continues that he will wait until embarrassing rumors die down and then step out gracefully.

Notes

After all there is nothing criminally wrong about getting stock issues below the market price as a bribe. One of the most prominent witnesses in the recent short selling inquiry is now working a raffle pool. He has given up the short side.

Three close to Mr. Hoover said he is more interested than any other in the formation of protective agencies for holders of South American bonds. He has some.

A PITIFUL note in the news of the day:

Flood, drought, heat and FAMINE are causing suffering and death in China.

Famine! What a pity it is that while parts of the world are plagued by the problem of what to do with food surpluses, people in other parts of the world are starving.

We still have a lot to learn.

WILEY POST is flying around the world in an effort to break previous airplane speed records. We watch his effort with interest.

Meanwhile, in a not particularly conspicuous news story, we learn that the Northern Pacific is building a motorized, streamlined, exceedingly light passenger train that is expected to be capable of a top speed of 200 miles an hour.

If speed is what the traveling public wants and apparently it is, the railroads are planning to supply it.

Earlier Days

(From Files of The Klamath Republican, July, 1909)

A mammoth sawmill plant and 15 miles of railroad will be constructed by the Houghton-Kelly Lumber company and their associates in the vicinity of Yamhar mountain, where the parties concerned have holdings of about $7,000 acres of timber.

The length of the line from the junction to the timber is about 15 miles, the grade practically level, and only one crossing of the Williamson river will be necessary. A surveying party will be sent in shortly to locate this line.

This bears out a statement from a prominent lumberman who said recently that within five years all of the large holders of timber would have immense lumber plants in operation in this section and that the timbermen would do more to bring competitive roads into the Klamath country than any other factor. In fact, the larger interests are at this time figuring with three different railroad companies to enter the field, according to local authorities.

Inland Air Route Still in Mind

NOT long ago an air caravan from the north nestled into the Klamath basin on a tour designed to foster interest in the development of an inland route. The requirements of speed, safety and profit were discovered abundantly in this region which would become a central spot in an air chain as far north as Alaska and as far south as Mexico.

For the moment the project is a dream, but air experts believe it such a thorough and practical dream they one day predict the establishment of this new line.

The air development of the Klamath region has been neglected by necessity. There has been no time nor any money, and the traffic has moved up and down the west-of-the-mountains lanes.

But slowly the program becomes prominent, and another tour of this country will be started before the summer ends. The tour, considered by a group of air enthusiasts at Portland, will make a survey of the lakes in Southern Oregon. An amphibian plane will be used and landings will be made on the water.

Perhaps this is but a stunt, but yet stunts have played such an important part in air advancement we believe it will take a few of them to keep the inland route in front.

White House

Anyone who has had a peek inside the White House knows the friendly informality there is not a pose.

In days past dinner was announced by a fully dressed attendant. He would go from room to room, bowing, scraping, announcing: "Dinner is served."

Now it is not uncommon for one of the younger members of the family to call upstairs in a loud voice: "Come on down; dinner is ready."

Any doubting Thomases also would have been convinced if they had seen Mrs. Roosevelt recently tripping through historic corridors in a wet bathing suit. She went for a swim in the new pool and dressed upstairs.

Code

An economist from a mid-western university was called in by the administration to look over the steel code. He declared it illegal. He said the labor provision would have to be changed.

His reasoning was based on the fact that it gives employers the machinery to organize nationally but does not provide the same machinery for employees.

At the same time, some administration spokesmen were whispering to labor leaders that they could use the code to their own advantage. If the company union is accepted, labor organizers can then devote themselves to taking it over instead of trying to set up a new organization.

It becomes more evident every day that the labor section of the code is not yet in final form. The one finally made public is the fifth submitted by the industry. The first four were turned down privately by General Johnson, Madame Perkins, et al.

To the Editor

(Editor's note)—It will be impossible to print in the column the great number of communications received from our readers in connection with Friday's election.

To give adequate space to these letters discussing measures before the voters, it would be necessary to publish them Friday. This would be contrary to the election laws of the state, so we regretfully explain these excellent communications on the election must be eliminated.

We continue to welcome communications from our readers on all subjects.

The Municipal Band Seeks Aid

THERE is in Klamath Falls a municipal band and its modesty has only been surpassed by its excellent concert talent. The organization of musicians has been quietly struggling along for several years, but this year it has received a helping hand from the public.

The junior chamber of commerce, an organization of alert young men, has volunteered its assistance, and will co-operate with a citizens' committee in supporting the band. A campaign has been developed to raise funds to finance a series of public concerts, equip the organization,

Woodin

There is one man here who knows these stories about treasury secretary Woodin resigning cannot be true. He is Mr. Woodin's colored messenger, Geo. the only important hold-over from the Mellon-Mills regime.

Geo points out that Mr. Woodin has leased a Washington home containing thirty-two rooms and ten baths. It is utterly inconceivable to him that a man would require so many baths unless he was planning on staying here.

Apparently Mr. Woodin is not so certain. Recently he saw a story in a New York newspaper stating Senator Coughens would succeed him. He called Acting Secretary Dean Acheson on the telephone, asking: "How do you like your new boss?"

Mr. Acheson did not understand until Mr. Woodin mentioned the story. Mr. Acheson then said that pending more substantial information he would con-

PROOF THAT NEW FACE POWDER WON'T MAKE BLOTCHES

Many face powders are made out of cosmetics which darken when the oil in the preparation soaks them.

Perforation comes out through the opening of your pores and the oil along with it. Every pore which is giving out oil is darkening the powder around the opening of the pore. That you have dark spots around the pores and white spots between them, making an ugly, blotchy face, blotches, especially on the nose.

The new Mellin's Face Powder consists of these interior cosmetics which are so easily darkened by the oil in your preparation. Prove it for yourself. Powder one side of your nose with another powder. Powder the other side with the new Mellin's. In five minutes, let your mirror give you the answer.

We challenge the world to produce a finer and more beautiful face powder than the one Mellin's. The new Mellin's formula is the formula used by the most exclusive comedians in New York and Paris.

You don't buy face powder to make your face look lumpy and blotchy. Therefore, do not waste your money on powders that you are not sure of. Ask for Mellin's Face Powder by name. Look for the name Mellin's Face Powder on the gold box. Before the sale offer of "comparing just is good," which may block your face. Ask for Mellin's by name and get it. 50¢ and $1. Tax free.

Preparations are being made to commence haying throughout this district. The grass hay, where there is water, is still in a splendid growing condition. Haying this year, however, is late compared with a year ago, when it started shortly after the Fourth of July.
