WORLD'S FAIR STRATOSPHERE FLIGHT READY

By SAM KNOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, July 21 (U.P.)—The group of Picard-Compton-Settle flying scientists last night completed months of preparations for one of the shortest yet one of the most important aerial flights in history.

The flight will be one of the shortest because regardless of how much traveling around they do getting there the fliers' destination will be only some 10 miles away.

It is one of the most important because that 10 mile destination happens to be straight up and as Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle pointed out, "there's a vast difference between traveling 10 miles north or south from Chicago and traveling the same distance up from the same location."

It has not been definitely settled, and may not be until the time of the flight, who will accompany Settle on the world's fair flight into the stratosphere which Prof. August Picard of Europe had twice explored.

Present tentative plans are for Picard's twin brother, Jean, to be the second man in the gondola and to carry out the five scientific experiments which are the purpose of the flight. It was indicated today, however, that at the last minute an unnamed assistant of Dr. Arthur Compton may take Jean Picard's place when the 15 story tall balloon takes off from Soldier field to remain aloft for 24 history making hours.

Settle announced tonight that the balloon was ready and all the costly equipment in place in the gondola. All he is waiting for now is perfect weather.

The balloonist said there was a slight possibility the take-off may be made Saturday or Sunday, but that it probably would not be until sometime next week. Weather conditions, he pointed out, must be perfect.

Although the balloon is as big as a 15 story building, the gondola is only seven feet in diameter. When the fliers reach the stratosphere, 26,000 feet above the earth, they will seal the gondola. At that height the temperature is constant at 55 degrees below zero. The atmosphere is far too low to maintain life so the balloonists will have to get their oxygen out of bottles.

Settle is confident that the present Picard altitude record of 53,153 feet will be broken.

WHAT THE WELL DRESSED MAN WILL WEAR

Looking forward a few months into the mirror of fashion, the careful dresser will note many unusual and desirable changes in the design of men's clothing.

The new drape styles, created for the comfort of the man who is taking his work and recreation strenuously in these changing times, are a distinct departure from more closely fitting suits and overcoats seen in recent years.

Shoulders are natural, but wide

To begin with, the so-called "lounge construction," that is destined to make the newer styles tremendously popular, has fullness in exactly the right places to insure maximum comfort and yet is molded to fit the figure and emphasize the curves and angles which make for distinction in the science of tailoring. No matter how busy you may be, the soft, easy drape of these new styles will give you a look of leisure.

Shoulder padding, which would be out of place in these new drape coats, has been practically eliminated. The shoulder lines are natural and deep folds appear in the front of the coat.

These features have been somewhat emphasized in suits of lounge construction by a new type of collar which sets farther away from the side of the neck and is, therefore, less upright and noticeably flatter.

This is illustrated in the figure above, as is also the high notched lapel, which serves to strengthen the taste of fullness across the chest and the natural shoulder lines.

The coat is sharply depressed at the waist and has but two buttons, only the top one of which is used.

Combined, these new features make the wearer look broader in the shoulders and narrower in the waist.

An entirely new note is offered in pocket design. Special hand stitching is used on patch pockets to give the coat a distinctive appearance combined with a more informal touch, as illustrated below. This stitching, which is called "Franklin," is placed ¾ of an inch in from the edge of the coat and vest as well.

A French word, "jetted," has been adopted to describe another unusually stylish type of pocket to be found on the newer coats. It has no flap, but the two edges are piped to give the opening a smooth, even line.

Vests, this year are tailored to combine comfortably and stylishly with the drape coat and the new high rise trousers, which are given a decided fullness by the addition of two pleats on each leg. While the vest has six buttons, the lower one is designed to be left unfastened.

Patch pockets with Franklin stitching

The preferred fabrics will be worsteds, both finished and unfinished, and Saxonies. Popular colors, among the more discerning dressers, will be brown, grey and blue grey.

Bespectacled Fireman Wynn Wants Reforms For Jokes

By Alanson Edwards
United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, July 21, (U.P.)—Ed Wynn, the bespectacled fireman, announced a desire today to put his horse's halter on the folks who groan at puns.

Fondling his white iron helmet, the chief leaned against a watering trough and told all about where good little jokes come from, where bad little jokes go to—and why he likes cinnamon on his puns.

Ready to Fight

"A pun may be the lowest form of wheat, but thirty years in the rib-tickling racket have convinced me contrarily," Wynn opined, yanking off his rubber boots and assuming a fighting pose.

"A guy would be dumb if he spent that much time at anything and didn't learn what made it tick. Me, I'm modest, but I know a good pun from a bad one, and I know good puns are good jokes."

The horse started whinnying, but Wynn silenced him.

"When they groan at a pun it's just because they're sore they didn't think it up first!" the chief cried. "It's like Little Red Riding Hood said when she saw the wolf—'My, what sour grapes you have, grandma!'

Puns Educational

"Puns are swell practice, and they're educational. Only the other day I was looking up the derivation of the word discrepancy, and couldn't find it in Latin or the Greek, or even in a restaurant. Why? Because it was German—Discrepancy Deutsch?"

The horse reared on its haunches and snorted.

"I've got a haunch the horse didn't like that one," sighed Wynn, "and I wouldn't want to antagonize him. I think it would be better if I go antagonize walk.

"No, but listen, haha! I don't think all puns are funny. When somebody says, 'I hear Frank was burned today!' and you say 'Frankfurter'—Huh, that isn't funny. But if you say 'Arthur told me it was cold today,' and I say, 'Arthur who?' and you say, 'Arthur Mometer'—say, that's a good one."

Wynn excused himself while he repaired the tie rope which the horse had broken in its wild plunging.

"So-o-o-o, I got a great idea for visual puns. In my movie I'm going to walk into a clothing store and ask for a pair of white ducks. The salesman will come out leading a pair of white ducks on a string.

"See! You're laughing already! I can laugh at 'em myself. I've been given honorary fire chief badges in 8 cities, and still I can laugh! Me, the honorary president of the United States board of health and the possessor of parchments from New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis and Albuquerque.

"Hollywood? Nope; I'm here to reduce. It's a great place to lose flesh. A woman lost 250 pounds the other day—Her husband left her.

"Hey! Whoa!"

He vanished up the street in hot pursuit of the horse.
