

OFFICER OF U. S. CHAMBER HERE JULY 31

Ralph Bradford, manager of the commercial organization department of the United States, who will address the Klamath county chamber of commerce at a forum meeting July 31, is an outstanding exponent of the chamber of commerce movement, and a student of the field of business and civic activities with which that movement is concerned.

He deals with the subject of organized effort not only out of the practical experience of one who has for a number of years engaged actively in chamber of commerce work, but from the broad viewpoint of one who has been occupied with correlated activities in the editorial and commercial field. He has lectured extensively on economic subjects, represented important commercial concerns in extension and development, and has worked in the newspaper field.

Intimate With Problems
As manager of the commercial organization department of the national chamber he is in close touch with problems affecting the organization, structure and programs of work of chambers of commerce, as well as the day-to-day developments in the movement in all sections of the country. During recent years, especially, he has had opportunity to observe closely the efforts of those organizations in dealing with emergency problems incident to changed economic conditions.

In connection with the discussion of the programs of work of chambers of commerce, he considers necessarily the broader questions of business policy with which they must deal, and the fundamental social needs upon which their efforts should be predicated. His address, therefore, in addition to their analysis of organization problems, deal with timely fashion with outstanding questions that are currently before the business community for solution.

Mr. Bradford holds the opinion that the chamber of commerce, as the vehicle of the collective business and civic enterprise of the community, must just itself constantly to changing economic conditions manifested in our developing cities; and that while it has a continuing function whose value is tremendous, one important test of its permanence and utility lies in its ability to cope with social and extraordinary conditions such as have been during the past three years of economic depression.

Chamber Influence Wide
He holds that the "plant" of the chamber of commerce is the whole community, not some particular part or interest, and its concern must be with policies and principles as well as with types of activity. Directly and forcefully through certain of its activities and agencies, the chamber of commerce serves the interest of trade, commerce and industry. Business, he believes, is not directly commercial in its nature. Business, as community welfare, may be affected by state and national legislation, by governmental policies, by social conditions and the manner in which people live. All these things, Mr. Bradford holds, are in their larger aspects the concern of the chamber of commerce.

Earl Fehl's Trial
On Ballot Theft Is Opened in Klamath

His first challenge excused Mrs. Viola Dunbar, of Klamath Falls, and Frank Savage, Chiloquin merchant, was drawn in her stead.

In the course of the day 20 veniremen were examined. Good progress was made.

The defense attorneys in their questioning of jurors asked if they were acquainted with former Sheriff Ralph Jennings of Jackson county, who instituted the recount proceedings that the state contents was the motive for the theft and destruction of the ballot pouches, the extent of their reading and talking about the case; the view of the veniremen upon the right of free assembly, and if they believed any citizen had a right at any time to see his county judge when he saw fit.

Line of Questioning
The main points of the state's questioning were: Do you realize this is a criminal case and not a political matter, have you any aversion against the testimony of state's witnesses, who have entered pleas of guilty; will you be swayed by sympathy; and if the jurors were members of the Taxpayers League, of which Attorney John Irwin for the defense is a presiding officer.

The defense is represented by Attorneys A. C. Hough of Grants Pass; H. Von Schnitz of Burns; T. J. Wright of Medford and John Irwin of Klamath Falls.

not stuff on the ball. Their flight from Wales to America was one of the nearest jobs I've ever seen pulled. The breaks were against them at the end, that's all."

LONDON, July 24. (UP)—All of Great Britain was happy today that Jim and Amy Mollison had completed their flight to America and there were many expressions of sympathy for their misfortune in crashing when alighting at New York.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 24. (AP)—Refreshed by nine hours' sleep, Britain's famous flying couple—Captain Jim and Amy Mollison—regarded cheerfully today the crack-up which ended their flight over the North Atlantic.

Friends said they were in good spirits when they awakened at the Bridgeport hospital. Their beds were pushed aside by side and the air adventurers discussed new plans. A friend, Vernon Smart, of New York City, said they would issue a statement soon regarding the future.

Plane Wrecked
Their plane "Seafarer," in which they flew from Pendine, Wales, planning to start over the ocean again to Baghdad, and thence back to England, lay in swampy grass at the rim of the Bridgeport airport, virtually a complete wreck from last night's mishap. Airport officials said only a few parts could be salvaged.

The Mollisons slept soundly, Dr. Isaac L. Harshberger, their physician, said.

They wore new honors as well as bandages. Jimmy found himself the first man to fly across the North Atlantic twice from east to west, while Amy was the first woman to make such a flight in a heavier-than-air craft.

Both Exhausted
The British Empire's famous flying couple in their "greatest gamble," crashed last night near the end of the first leg of what was to be a triangular flight from Wales to New York, thence to Baghdad and thence back to England.

Physical exhaustion caused the accident after the Mollisons had flown 39 hours from Pendine Sands, Wales, to within 40 miles of New York. Their gasoline nearly gone, they tried to bring the plane down on a runway at Bridgeport airport, only to have it shoot into marshlands and turn over.

"I was so tired I didn't know where I was headed," Mollison whispered as mechanics carried him and his wife away on stretchers made from fabric torn from the Seafarer.

NEW YORK, July 24. (AP)—Wiley Post has no illusions about the longevity of that record of 7 days, 15 hours and 45 minutes he set in his dash around the globe. He thinks some one will break it in the not too distant future.

ASTORIA PROTESTS PORTLAND ACTION

ASTORIA, Ore., July 24. (AP)—Provoked at the attitude of Portland interests in protesting the proposed Astoria trans-Columbia river bridge, Mayor J. C. Ten Brook today issued a public statement calling upon the citizens of Astoria to strike "in their own defense" and register such protest through channels of trade as to make business interests of Portland realize Astoria is "in deadly earnest."

man. "It will impair the prestige of the president. It is the fall of the lumber business will spiral downward with its present bad position."

He objected to the method of allotting quotas or production, of fixing minimum prices and to the wage and hour scales proposed.

He suggested that 50 cents an hour be paid for a 20 hour week in saw mills and a 36 hour week in logging camps. He asserted that no advantage was to be gained from the 40 to 48 hour week proposed in the code as those hours are now prevalent.

He also asserted the code provided no protection against imports from Canada, many of whose mills are owned and operated by Americans.

Several times tension arose between Denman and Cates. Once Cates warned him that he must not question the good faith of the proponents of the code and on another occasion the deputy administrator said Denman had made a "deliberate and malicious statement."

Denman criticized provisions for price-fixing by a governing board, asserting this would "leave to trustees a discretion they have not demonstrated they possess."

He said price fixing provisions were extremely difficult of enforcement and added, "we'll have to have as many snipers as we had to have not to enforce prohibition."

MILK PRICE JUMP STUDIED TUESDAY NIGHT

Final details of the Klamath milk price raise will be decided on at the meeting of distributors and producers at the city hall Tuesday evening.

A survey has been made through the county agricultural relative to differences in cost of production of market milk over the cost of producing sour cream. The differences have been discussed by the producers and distributors as a part of the basis for the price raise, tentatively set for August 1.

In order that an accurate estimate of the additional cost could be made, Earl Gardiner, cow tester for the Klamath Cow Testing association, inspected four leading dairy herds to obtain figures from the producers themselves.

The table shows an additional cost of $9.68 in the four herds comprising 215 cows, above the cost of sour cream production. With the average production of 300 pounds of fat per year per cow, the additional cost of producing market milk is 15 cents per pound butter fat. Gardiner's figures showed, The figures, he stated, do not allow for profit on market milk, but just cover necessary added cost of producing and selling milk from ranch with modern equipment.

votes that did federal repeal. Those who analyzed the condition said this was because of the obscure and confusing wording of the federal repeal ballot title. It was necessary, in order to vote against the 18th amendment, to vote for the 21st, or repealing amendment. Many who intended to vote for repeal, wasted their vote by throwing it in with the dry voting strength.

The vote for repeal of the 18th amendment was 133,936 to 79,876. The state repeal vote was 138,837 to 71,324. This count included all of Oregon's 1,787 precincts except 59 tiny and remote places with a handful of votes.

The sales tax vote was 164,729 to 44,444 against the proposal. The proposed tax was referred by the legislature as a means of lifting the tax burden from the shoulders of property owners. The grange and other organizations led a successful battle against its adoption.

FARMERS WARNED ON RECOVERY ACT

are prepared to take prompt action before the next congress beginning in January.

"I do not entertain the view that the present grain trade has any divine right to handle the farmers' products," Peek said.

"The institutions engaged in marketing exist and will continue to exist just so long as they provide a useful service."

"If they do not perform such service then it will be necessary for farmers to find some other method for marketing their products."

"This country cannot go on permitting farmers to be disposed of their farms and homes through no fault of their own because of their inability to make the cost of production."

"My prediction is that unless the farmers of the country can be assured that they are going to get a square deal—not two or three years hence but now and before congress reassembles, then events will happen which will make what we already have seen look like a pleasant dream."

"I want to emphasize to every one connected with the grain trades the necessity that you put your own house in order where it needs to be put in order."

"We are not going to undertake to superimpose something on the grain trades until after they have had an opportunity to work out their problems themselves."

"If this is not done, promptly, however, I will make no promises."

Peek's comments were made public in written form by the government after he had confronted the grain conference.
