Pioneer Woman Of Southern Oregon Complimented

One of the interesting events of the past week was a birthday dinner given to Mrs. A. L. Harvey of Ashland at the Lillian park by descendants into the fifth generation in her family, which was attended by about thirty of the immediate descendants of the well known pioneer of Oregon pioneers.

Mrs. Harvey came to Oregon when she was four years of age, having crossed the plains in the so-called "covered wagon" of that period from the old home at Springfield, Mo. in the neighborhood of Abraham Lincoln's home. After a journey of about six months across the plains, the family settled in the valley which has since been the home of Mrs. Harvey.

The death of white settlers at that time caused more or less of a hostile association with the Indians inhabiting the valley, and to this day the great old lady delights in interspersing her conversation with words and phrases of the Indian origin. She is a childlike, cheerful, and in her childhood, though the association with the original Americans.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the gathering of the five generations for a memorial picture, presented among other things to the honored guest. Mrs. Harvey was assisted by Mrs. Leda E. Parker, her daughter, Mrs. John McWhorter, her grand-daughter, Mrs. Mildred Cantel, her great-grand-daughter, Mrs. John McWhorter, her great-grand-daughter, Mrs. Sharon Lee McWhorter.

Those present at the gathering to assist in the celebration were Mrs. A. E. Gregory, another valley pioneer and the mother-in-law of Mrs. Harvey's oldest son; Mr. and Mrs. Kate O'Brien, Mrs. Adeline W. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John Harvey, Mrs. J. H. Deaton, Mrs. Leda Parker, Mrs. A. M. Deaton and children, Jack and Betty, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Gifford and daughter Florence, Miss Frances Seiden.

Grandma Will Remember Little Jo and Beth and Meg

These devoted maidens, left to right, are Frances Lee, Jean Parson, Katherine Hepburn and Joan Bennett, though you might not expect it, for their clothes conceal the charms as often revealed in her modern movies. They're playing principal roles in the film version of Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women," whose characters were grim and modern and recurring little home bodies—not at all like the modern misses Holly wood beauties usually portray.
