FOREST LUMBER

COMPANY OPENS

Saws began humming their way through pine logs in the Porest Lumber company mill Pine Ridge Thursday when the plant began operations again after a shut down of nearly three years.

Full crews of between 75 and 160 men went back to work on an eight hour shift, according to an official of the company, who asserted that as far as possible all the old employes had be'n taken back on the payroll.

"We don't need any ore men," this official declared Thursday afternoon, "as there are still many in Pine Ridge whom we have not been able to employ."
