Coming Festivities and Early Fall Marriages Hold Society's Interest

PLANS for an increasingly gay social season, including dancing parties, attractive club programs and various interesting study projects, hold the interest of Klamath Falls society, as the autumn season progresses.

Announcement of a number of marriages of popular young people of the city, as well as the attendant affairs honoring the bride parties, have held an important place in the season's social activities, and promise to stay in the spotlight during the coming weeks.

Forgotten is the lethargy of summer, and the half-hearted fall awakening, for as the weather cools, energy is generated by active social groups, and the coming autumn and winter season promises to be one of the gayest and most active since the so-called depression settled its black wings over the nation.

Plans for relief of the needy still occupy an important place in the winter's program, however, and virtually all organizations are including such projects in their year's programs.

Meanwhile, Klamath Falls is emerging from a period of quiet and inertia, and if present plans reach their culmination, there will be no lack of social activity during the coming months.

Lovely fall flowers were used in profusion throughout the Mills home.

Mrs. Scott, who will be remembered in Klamath Falls as Anna Mae Johnson, will return to Passaic early in October, and before her departure, she will be entertained by many of her friends.

In the vanquished eight in the championship flight, Mrs. P. A. Albertson won over Mrs. Paul W. Sharp on Friday.
