

Town Team Starts Campaign

Independent Squad Looking for a "God Father." Roycroft Has Many Years of Football Behind Him. Gonsaga May Be Troublesome for Beavers.

An abundance of enthusiasm and material isn't going to be sufficient to assure the Klamath town team of a successful football season. The Townies, now in their third year of organization, are scanning the city for a "god father."

This team, brought together in 1931 in the interest of the police milk fund, has an optimistic outlook for gridiron strength. It turned to work last Sunday with the dash and color making for a popular and winning eleven and it continues its practice this week with the hope of eventually finding someone willing to give it something more substantial than just moral support.

The town team is working entirely upon its own initiative. There is no one to support it but the members themselves yet this has not handicapped the amount or quality of the candidates.

More than 30 young men, all of them either ex-college or university players, have pledged themselves to an autumn of difficult practice under Lynn Roycroft, head coach and manager.

"I have never seen a group of boys from so many widely scattered points and strangers to each other so to work with as much zest as these candidates for the town team," Roycroft said.

Last Sunday Roycroft had to extend the two-hour practice session simply because the men wouldn't quit working.

Roycroft's personal record as a coach isn't particularly well-known. He has been mixed up with the game in one way or another since 1911 and has played every position but center.

He started out in 1911 as a lineman for Willamette Academy at Salem. Then he played two seasons for The Dalles high school and later two more for the old Portland Academy in the interscholastic league.

Two years of semi-college ball at Mt. Angel college rounded out his experience before he joined the army. He played on service eleven during the period of his enlistment.

Roycroft enrolled at the University of Oregon following his discharge and won a regular position on the freshman team. In 1921 and 1922 he was a member of the varsity squad under "Bib" Huntington, the successor to Hugo Beadeck. He never quite made the first string for he was backing Spike Dick Reed, and the Shields' "vers" for positions in the line.

The Townies' coach played his last years in football with an independent team at The Dalles and with Columbia Park of Portland.

Stopping the entangled Gonsaga Bulldogs will be Oregon State's difficult job this Saturday. The Bulldogs, losing to both Oregon and Washington without being able to score, are "mathematically" due to win.

Gonsaga's strong passing attack should intimidate the Beaver defenders. Ike Peterson, halfback, tossed the Beavers ragged last season and there's no real reason to believe he won't do it again this year. Frank Carroll, the quarterback, is another outstanding passer.

This will be a test for the Lonnie Stiner offense. Oregon State didn't find it necessary to uncover much of an attack against Montana, but it will be a different story Saturday. What Oregon State will do in the coast conference can be pretty well determined after the Bulldog contest.

Norman Franklin, the Beavers' fine halfback, will carry the brunt of the attacking Saturday. He passes well and is a strong man around the ends and off tackle. He is a quick kicker and extremely dangerous from the punt formation for he can kick, run or pass.

TWO FIGHTERS ARRIVE HERE

Brown and Bailey Confident of Victory Friday

Two confident main event fighters, Ernie Bailey and Elmer Brown, were in Klamath Falls today for their match at the Legion hall Friday night. The self-assurance of both athletes bore out all advance predictions of an exciting battle.

Bailey, the young featherweight from Aberdeen, Wash., arrived in Klamath Falls Wednesday. He admitted quite candidly he had never heard of Elmer Brown, and eagerly bet ten dollars on his own ability to win.

Brown, well known here for his decisive victories in the Legion hall, ranked high in popular estimation. He was considered faster and more clever than Bailey, but not as strong a puncher.

Both Bailey and Brown have met Joe Calder. Brown won two decisions in two fights and Bailey knocked Calder down three times in their main event encounter in the north.

The four other fighters in the top bouts have been attracting large audiences at public workouts. The workouts have been held each night at Scandia hall. Ad Cadena, Los Angeles lightweight, will clash with Joe Cuffman of Klamath Falls. Bud Zimmerman and Jack Hibbard, both Klamath lightweights, will fight in the six-round special event. Mack Lillard, Klamath promoter, has also billed a four-round curtain raiser between surprise opponents.

Sewell caught just in front of the plate.

No runs, one hit, one error, two left.

Senators—Herman Bell went to the box for the Giants.

Manush up: Foul, strike one, into the upper deck back of the plate. Ball one, low. Manush hit for a nice running catch.

Cronin up: Ball one, low. Strike one, swinging hard at a fast ball. Ball two, inside. Ball three, it was a slow one, inside. Cronin grounded sharply to Ryan and was thrown out at first as Terry tagged the Washington manager after being pulled off the base by Ryan's throw.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

NINTH INNING

New players reporting were: James O'Neill, back from St. Thomas college and the University of Washington freshman; Joe MacDonald, St. Thomas college end; Joe Morier, backfield man from LaGrande; Clifford Hogan, former Klamath high school quarterback; Frank Norton, ex-warden from the West Coast navy; Ed Kenstra, wingman from Franklin high at Seattle; Nick Carter, halfback from the Medina Athletic club at Chicago.

SON-FRESHMAN CONTEST SET

Big Game for Klamath Scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 28.

Klamath Falls' biggest football game of the season, Southern Oregon Normal school against the University of Oregon Freshmen, has been definitely scheduled for October 28. This information was received from Howard Hobson, Ashland coach, Thursday, by the Klamath junior chamber of commerce.

Final scheduling of the game for Modoc field followed several weeks of negotiations between the normal school and Klamath and Medford high schools.

High Schools Play Friday

Conflicts in schedules have been smoothed over satisfactorily and the high school game between Medford and Klamath will be played here the Friday before the SON-Fresh contest.

This game on October 25, sponsored by the junior chamber of commerce, marks the first major engagement for Klamath Falls. Both Hobson and Hugh E. Rossen, graduate manager at the University of Oregon, have expressed interest in bringing their teams here annually.

Record Crowd Assured

Both the normal school and the yearlings will have former Pelicans in their lineups. Chas. Berry, Bill Estes and Rex Hanzake are candidates at Oregon, while Bob Elliott and Lewis MacAninch have found positions on the SON squad.

The chamber will start an active promotion campaign immediately and from present indications a record crowd is almost assured.

AVRIT NAMES KLAMATH TEAM

Full Strength Available for Game with Corvallis High.

The Klamath Pelicans, coming to the end of five blistering days of scrimmaging, will march against Corvallis Saturday in command of their full strength. A number of minor injuries were bothering members of the team Thursday, but none were sufficient to prevent losses to the lineup.

Klamath continued to stand out as a pre-game favorite. This, however, was taken as no assurance of victory, inasmuch as the strength of the Corvallis team still is unknown.

Klamath Wins Two

Klamath has won both its early season games, against Weed and Alturas, but Corvallis lost its opening start to Tillamook last week. Reports from the north say the Corvallis team has improved.

No change will be made in the Pelican backfield combination unless Chester Jones, halfback, is ready to start. Norman Taber will be at fullback, Eugene Barrows at quarter, and Bob Leslie and Wayne Perry on the halfback jobs.

Billy Horn and Lynn Propst, the two experienced ends, will start. Homer Maxwell and Johnny Pastega have been selected for the guard positions and Nello Giovanni and Buford Weeks for the tackles. The center position still is in doubt, but Les Avritt, coach, believed Francis Hess would be in at the kickoff.

The Pythian games were held at Pytho (later Delphi) every four years, in the second year of each Olympiad or four-year period between Olympic games.
