RED CROSS AIDS DISASTER RELIEF

American Red Cross units were called upon to give relief to victims of 129 disasters during the year, according to reports received by Glen Hout, chairman of the Klamath county chapter of the Red Cross. Expenditures for these relief projects totaled $1,777,000.

Three of the major disasters were in the Pacific area and included the Southern California earthquake last March, and floods at Kelso, Washington, and Bonnera Ferry, Idaho.

This chapter was called upon to meet a quota of $375 to help in these Pacific area disasters. The board of directors of Klamath chapter were reluctant to make an extra drive for these funds at that time when our people were already vexed with solicitations of all sorts, and we believed we would obtain a more hearty response to our coming annual roll call were we to make our contribution from the treasury, which was done.

"We never know where disaster will strike," said Chairman Hout, "and I urge that the people of this community to renew their membership in the Red Cross that it may be equipped to cope with any disaster situation."
