

KLAMATH CHILD GUIDANCE UNIT NOW OPERATING

A child guidance extension unit of the type authorized by the legislature in its 1937 session has recently been established in Klamath Falls. The preliminary organization work has been completed and preparations are under way to hold the first regular clinic this fall, at the beginning of the school year. Officers of the local committee are: Dr. Neil Black, M. D., public health physician, chairman; Mrs. Isabelle Brinker, rural school supervisor, vice-chairman; and Mrs. Twyla Ferguson, commissioner of the Girl Scout council and representative of the Klamath County Public Health Association, secretary. Other participants include: J. P. Wells, superintendent of schools; Dwight Gilchrist, executive director of the Boy Scouts; William Baillie, Mrs. Nelson Reed, representative of the League of Women Voters; George Walton, secretary of the Klamath County Red Cross; Max Dudley, executive secretary of the Klamath County relief committee; Fred Peterson, superintendent of the Klamath County public schools; Dr. George H. Adler, M. D., representative of the Klamath and Lake County Medical Society; Judge Edward B. Ashurst, juvenile judge; Mrs. J. Royal Shaw, president of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. A. H. Rodgers, president of the Klamath County Parent-Teacher Council.

Although there have been some steps taken towards establishment of child guidance work in Klamath Falls previously, the new set-up will allow this work to be carried on much more efficiently than has been done heretofore. Child guidance clinics have been operating in some of the larger cities of the country for a number of years. Most of them have been organized within the past two decades. In a few cases steps have been taken towards setting up clinics in smaller communities, but Oregon is really the pioneer in making this type of service conveniently available to a large portion of the population.

These clinics are for the aid of normal children who are handicapped from doing their best work by reading disabilities, emotional upsets, difficulties in adjusting to environment, etc. They are not organized for the purpose of diagnosing or handling mentally deficient children, but to help the child who has been retarded by personal problems.

As an example of the work that will be done, there is the problem of reading disabilities. Such a special difficulty can make a child who is otherwise normal appear to be mentally deficient and cause retardation in school, and cause him to feel insecure and inadequate. Frequently such a difficulty is due to a condition known as word blindness, which can be corrected by a brief special training course. The child can then catch up in his school work and in other accomplishments and the good effects are obvious. Many other problems can similarly often be overcome by a little extra attention and help, to the lasting benefit of the child and the community.

The committee which has organized to maintain this type of service in Klamath Falls, will have a great deal of responsibility in seeing that full use is made of the service, and in carrying out the recommendations made for each case. Each problem must be studied in detail, from the physical, mental and environmental standpoint, so that a concise and true analysis of the problem can be made and definite remedies suggested. Assistance in making the final decision and recommendations will be given by psychiatrists from the University of Oregon Medical School. Aid in setting up the organization so that it can function smoothly and efficiently from the first is furnished by specially trained social workers, also connected with the medical school.

TEMPERANCE PLAY SCHEDULED SUNDAY

A quick trial at which the prosecution will seek the death penalty was ordered Friday for Hayward H. Johnson, alias Ralph Jones, alias the "Prisoner at the Bar."

Ralph Jones was brought in under heavy guard by Sheriff H. I. McKim and Judge Arthur C. Bates ordered a special jury of 12 men and women to report Sunday night at the First Christian church to decide the fate of the defendant.

The prosecuting attorney, Clyde O'Neal, announced he would demand the death penalty, and he said he expected the jury to return it in short order. The defense attorney, Norman Frisley, said he would base his defense plea on the fact that liquor was the cause of the death of Mrs. Jones.

This is not a detective thriller, but a temperance play to be presented by 21 prominent Klamath Falls citizens Sunday night at the Christian church. The drama is taken from an actual court scene in Iowa depicting a trial of a young man for murder, the cause for which is given in the play as liquor.

Other members of the cast selected are: J. A. Leech as the fingerprint expert from the police department; C. S. Robertson as the court clerk; Jacqueline Morris as the prisoner's little six-year-old daughter; Mrs. N. R. Fowler as the star witness and C. W. Stevens as the court bailiff.

The jury selected to try the prisoner follows: B. P. Alexander, William Blackman, R. W. Clapp, Henry Evans, Thomas Grubb, M. L. Miller, Frank Tunnell, Mrs. J. J. Keller, Mrs. George Wirtz, Mrs. Henry Duran, Mrs. Howard Uhlig and Mrs. E. L. Hamaker.

This is the third and final presentation of the drama-trial in Klamath Falls. Admission to the trial is free, but a voluntary pledge-offering will be taken to help carry on a temperance program throughout the state.

MEDICAL AID GIVEN 615 BY HEALTH UNIT

Medical service was administered to 615 indigent persons by the Klamath county health unit in the first six months of 1937, according to an analysis of the books made by Dr. Neil Black, county physician for the period from January 1 to June 30.

Each one of these cases was certified by the county relief committee as eligible for medical aid, and their visits to offices of the health unit totaled 1276. Each time medical attention was given and medicines dispensed.

A semi-annual financial statement from the health unit shows expenditures totaled $10,229.72 or $176.67 over the budgeted amount for the first half of 1937.

These figures were taken from the health department's books, which show that department maintenance cost more than half the amount budgeted for the six months' period, while other budgeted items were in excess of the amount expended.

When the budget was compiled there were few figures from past years to go by, and with activities increasing daily it was difficult to make up an adequate budget for the year, according to Dr. Black.

A present survey shows communicable diseases in Klamath county at the lowest ebb for some time, and the total of communicable diseases reported for the past quarter was the lowest for several years.

Despite a small pox epidemic of considerable size which occurred in Klamath county last winter, school attendance was little affected, and quick action in administering vaccine kept the disease at a minimum among children. Figures show that more adults were affected than children, and next year health officers hope to prevent a recurrence of the disease by making vaccination 100 per cent for school children.

Despite the hard winter and the smallpox epidemic, school attendance was 94 per cent, a fraction higher than in 1936, and the same as the 1935 attendance figure.

Work of the health unit during the summer months includes supervision of children's health at the various playgrounds and recreation centers, and a follow-up of all examinations made during the school year.

A close check is kept of children with health defects, and efforts are being made to bring them up to par before the opening of school in the fall.

Follow-up and remedial work is also being carried on as a result of pre-school child clinics which were held all over the county early this spring. Defects are being corrected, and pre-school children will be in good shape generally by the opening of school in September.

The staff of nurses at the health unit will be increased from three to five members for the year 1937. Dr. Black announced with his semi-annual report, at an additional expense to the community. The federal child health bureau has provided funds for one additional nurse as well as in increasing salaries of school nurses to a 12 months, or full-time basis.

The other additional nurse is to be provided by the federal health service.

WATER MAIN GOES TO NEARBY TRACT

Completion of one-half mile of new water main in New Deal tract located along Shasta Way near Altamont, was announced Thursday by the California-Oregon Power company. Services so far on the new line total 25.

Electrical service is being completed in this area as well as in the Empire tract and water main extension to the Miller subdivision farther east is expected in about a month, the company states.

MOST ACCIDENT PRINCIPALS RATED "NORMAL" DRIVERS

SALEM, Ore., July 9 (UP)

Two thousand, one hundred and sixty-one drivers involved in automobile accidents in the city of Portland during May were described as "normal" in the monthly accident report issued by the office of Secretary of State Earl Snell.

One hundred drivers were reported to have been drinking, and seven had fallen asleep at the wheel. Four were physically defective. Eighty-seven were "confused."
