Recreation Notes

News About Personalities and Events

A communication from the state supervisor of recreation and adult education states that an exhibit of the types of work done throughout the state will be made at the state fair this year. Klamath county has been asked to assist with this exhibit. The children of Klamath Falls were away ahead of the supervisor, in that they have anticipated such a move and have their portion of the exhibit all prepared, boxed and ready to go.

The articles to include knitting, embroidery and other types of work, as well as quilts made of red and blue drawing and other types of juvenile art work, plaques and a large assortment of articles made in the school shops. This will all be taken to Salem August 25, in plenty of time for the fair.

Klamath county boys and girls who have the opportunity to attend the state fair will have a chance to see how their work stacks up with that of the boys and girls of other communities. It will be an interesting comparison. We are quite sure our people will not be disappointed in the showing that is made.

Mrs. Marie Rosa Cone, who has been so busy this summer with her art classes in the Fremont building, must find new quarters. School will soon start, and the room she is using must be utilized in the regular school program. Hence the necessity of finding a studio that will accommodate the many who are attending the interesting art classes Mrs. Cone is teaching. The Fremont room must be turned over this week. Mrs. Cone is not yet decided where her new quarters will be. Her students will be able to find her at her home, 731 North Eleventh street, until further announcement is made. Incidentally Mrs. Cone's classes will be well represented in the state fair exhibit.

Work has already begun on the improvement of MODOC field. The foundation for the addition to the field house has been laid and preparations are under way to start that long-looked-for roof on the grandstand. Believe it or not, it will be possible to see some of those coming football games this fall without sitting in the rain. Won't that be something?

Some of the kids up on Richmond park playground are all 'holty-toity' because they got their picture on the front page of the newspaper this week. Others who didn't get in on this are 'burned up.' Of course, not at anyone in particular, but because they didn't happen to be present at the time.

Mrs. Collins, supervisor in charge of this playground, has discovered some of the best singing voices to show up this year. A group of girls who frequent the playground have been singing together and, take it from us, they are worth hearing. We had that opportunity Thursday morning when they didn't know anyone was listening. Perhaps they will give us a 'command' performance some of these days.

FORT KLAMATH RABBIT PRODUCES FATHERLESS BUNNY

FORT KLAMATH — Ray Ferguson of Fort Klamath reported a curious happening this week, when by a freak of nature his doe rabbit, who is 18 months old and mother of several previous litters of baby rabbits, gave birth to one lone rabbit, five weeks after she had borne four in her last litter. Ferguson was unable to explain the arrival of the lone baby rabbit in a separate pen for the last five weeks following the arrival of her litter of four, who are still nursing at this time. The latest arrival is slightly larger than its four predecessors, and Ferguson is at a loss for an explanation for the strange event.
