

INTEREST IN EVANGELICAL SERIES RISES

Interest in the Rayburn evangelistic mission is increasing steadily as the week-day attendance at the meetings grows apace, the Ministerial association reported Wednesday.

"This has been due to sheer ability," one pastor said. "There has been no suggestion of what the general public and the church world has come to know, in recent years, of the spectacular, sensational, commercial, high-power revivalist."

"Two incidents bear out this statement. When the newspapers asked for his cut, the evangelist had none with him, and his photograph had to be taken by the staff photographer."

"Then at the first evening meeting, when an offering was taken, it was discovered that there was no offering plates of any description, and it was necessary literally to 'pass the hat,' utilizing the headgear of the ushers in so doing."

"The usual evangelist would have had a press agent with write-ups and cuts showing the speaker in all sort of fantastic positions, and the offering would be the chief thing in his so-called revival."

"Dr. Rayburn is a preacher of righteousness. He does not pose as a salesman slipping something over on the public. He is proud of the fact that he is a preacher of the Gospel of Christ His Lord. He is reverent and demands reverence from his audience. He asserts again and again that he is working not for the present but for the future church of Christ in Klamath Falls."

"His Bible studies in the afternoon are marvels of lucidity and interpretation of scripture by scripture. In these as in all his talks he is thoroughly Biblical. Never once has he harped on 'modernism' or 'fundamentalism,' but all the time he is presenting simply and forcefully the word of God."

"In his evening addresses, in particular, people are beginning to realize that, in Dr. Rayburn, a speaker of unusual power has come to Klamath Falls. While apparently discarding the usual oratorical arts, Dr. Rayburn is in fact an unusual and effective orator. He seems to be talking informally and wholly extemporaneously, just giving expression in the simplest language, says a nationally known middlewestern editor, to the thoughts that come spontaneously to his mind."

"Now and then there bubbles up some whimsical idea or some humorous view or some glint of wit. But all the time, like a steel cable, upon which festoons may be hung but which stretches taut and unshakable from the point where it starts to the point to which it is going, runs the line of his argument."

Tuesday Dr. Rayburn addressed an audience all but filling the large tabernacle. It was "Sunday school night" and teachers with their classes were in evidence, although many, because of the late announcement of this event, were unable to contact their pupils. Dr. Rayburn spoke on the parable of the lost son, using the text, "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

He said in part: "Christ's heels were dogged by critics and faultfinders. It was the murmuring of the scribes and Pharisees that occasioned the utterance of the beautiful trilogy of parables, the lost sheep, the lost coin and the lost son, one theme throughout, something lost and found. Each parable closes with the thought of rejoicing, 'Joy in the presence of the angels of God.' Angels rejoice likely for reasons beyond us. Angels are greater in power and might, yet there are some reasons in which men should join.

"First, a value beyond computation is saved. We have so little sense of the value of the spirit. We think so much along materialistic lines and use materialistic standards. That's the trouble with America. We are losing the sense of spiritual values. The angels rejoice because one sinner repents."

"Second, the sinner comes out of a state of complete deprivation, so angels rejoice. A $10 bill when lost has no value. A lost silver dollar is of no more value than an old tin can. When a notorious bandit and bank robber was killed, I was reading the headlines, when a man looking over my shoulder said, 'Well, he is better off.' I replied, 'No. The community is better off. The state of Oklahoma is better off, but he is not better off.' What a terrible thing to say that a community is better off when a man dies. Can that be said of you, when you die? Will Klamath Falls be better off when you are laid away?"

"The sinner comes out of a state of complete deprivation into the richest social blessings and the fellowship of the saints. That is of inestimable value. Heretofore he has been deprived of usefulness. Now he invests his life and can expect valuable returns from it."

"One of the reasons why salvation doesn't mean anything these days is because damnation has ceased to mean anything. Damnation meant something to Jesus. He wept over the lost. The church of Jesus Christ needs to get back to the same emphasis on the tremendous cure of sin. If it is nothing to be saved, then Calvary has no meaning. If Calvary is only a martyrdom, we did not need it, because we have plenty of martyrs. Hell is just as logical as heaven."

"The angels rejoice in the third place because of what the sinner gains. 'All things are yours,' says the apostle Paul. 'What did the sinner gain?' He gained everything. He lost nothing. Some Christians live as though they were unhappy. Their theology is all right, but their psychology is all wrong."

"If angels care, isn't it about time we cared? There is somebody walking the streets of Klamath Falls this night without God and without hope that will either be reached in these meetings or he will never be reached at all."

"Permanent headquarters, open at all times for democratic meetings and social functions, will be maintained."

Democrats of every county are invited to attend the organization meeting.

His camera slung over his shoulder, a cigar in his hand, Rudolph Brandt, NEA Service cameraman, grins cheerfully, above, in Shanghai where he is covering the Chinese war—and grinned just as cheerfully a few days ago when he was caught in a Japanese air attack and narrowly escaped death. The raiders bombarded and machine-gunned Brandt and three other American photographers en route to the front in an auto. They escaped by fleeing under fire to a dugout.

VIENNA CHOIR BOYS OLD ORGANIZATION

The 20 pink-cheeked Austrian boys who will appear in a recital of songs and costumed opera at Klamath Union high school auditorium Sunday afternoon, November 21, at 3 o'clock, are the pick of the oldest choral organization in the world—the Vienna Choir boys, founded nearly 500 years ago by imperial edict of Maximilian the First.

Ambassadors of musical good will, these boys, aged eight to 12 years, have been chosen because of ability and character from a membership of 62, whose headquarters is Vienna, where they live in a modernized Hapsburg stronghold—the Castle Willhelmsburg—which is both their university and home. They are taught secular subjects by a staff of tutors and trained in music by famous Viennese professors. Franz Schubert was once a member of their organization.

While once the Vienna Choir boys were subsidized by imperial funds, today they are self-supporting. One of their sources of revenue is their summer hotel at Hintebichl, located 4500 feet above sea level in the Tyrol. Not only is there an income from 250 paying guests, but also from nearby vineyards owned by the organization, where a brand of fine wine is made and shipped throughout the world.

The main support of the boys, many of whom are chosen from indigent families because of exceptional ability, are the annual concert tours in America—of which the current one is the fifth. In a modern bus, accompanied by their musical director, their recitor and their nurse, they travel the highways of the country, stopping nightly at concert halls and auditoriums where packed houses greet them with adoration and amazement at their remarkable singing voices and histrionic talents.

In a few years, the inevitable will happen. Some of their voices will change by nature's decree. Then they will be maintained for three or more years until employment or a musical scholarship is obtained for them.

Two years ago the boys appeared in an American movie. They love sports: basketball, soccer and swimming are their favorites. The troupe consumes gallons of milk each day during its barnstorming trips, and special menus of paprika chicken and goulash are prepared for the boys wherever they stop.

News About Personalities and Events

TWO new 4-H club sewing classes were started in Klamath Falls Tuesday. Both were at Pelican City. One group is taking Division 1 sewing and is headed by Edna Rose Kahl who is president of the club. The other group will work in Division 2. The president of this club is Betty Buchanan.

Members of the Pelican PTA will act as local leaders of the two clubs just formed. These clubs make up in enthusiasm what they lack in size. They really mean business. Even some of the boys wished to join. There was probably a reason for that, however.

Here's one for the book. While visiting Kelly Robinette's shop class Monday night we noted another project we hadn't thought of as being likely for a shop program. We have been talking about utilitarian things that could be made in the shop. Something for the home and all that. You can't tell about these men, however. The project that seems to be growing in importance is the making of decoys for hunting season.

Some of these decoys are mighty clever. One almost expects to see them "take off" when you enter the room. Particularly those duck decoys. Those that are supposed to fool the geese aren't so bad either. Some of them fold up like a jack-knife. This for convenience in storing or packing we suppose.

The women who attend the shop classes practically all make articles for use in the home. Shelves, tables, whatnots, double-decker beds, stand-lamps and a dozen other things like that. But the men. With the exception of a half-dozen they are making boats, skis, decoys, gun-stocks and the like. And we call them the "sterner sex."

Another for the book. One little lady is coming to the shop class for the express purpose of making a set of dishes. Wooden dishes.
