Go to the Game

EVERY football team, it seems, must have some opponent for which it points, season after season. For Klamath Falls, this so-called traditional foe is Medford. Possibly due to the good-natured potato war that goes on more or less indefinitely between Klamath Falls and Bend, there has been some tendency to shift local attention to Bend as Klamath's main football rival. But Bend isn't in Klamath's conference, and the Medford game continues as the affair which contributes most to the success or failure of a Klamath high school football season.

The Medford game occurs on this Friday night. It will be the big test for the Klamath Falls team, which is functioning this year under a new coach and has not yet hit the stride its supporters believe it can obtain. A fine showing of community support Friday night will help it produce the brand of football that will bring victory in this crucial game.

Certainly no one could justifiably criticize Klamath Falls people this year for their attitude toward high school football. Every game, including the non-conference preliminaries at the opening of the season, has found a near-capacity crowd in the newly covered grandstand. The spirit shown has been a credit to the town, and it is good for the town.

It would be a fine sight if both the covered stand and the bleachers on the far side were filled for Friday night's game. That is a strong possibility.

GOP Disagreements

POLITICAL observers profess to see a fight developing in the republican party between Herbert Hoover and Alf M. Landon. Mr. Landon's forceful radio address of this week is regarded as a determined bid for retention by him of the leadership of the minority party, and the fact that he is not very strong for a mid-term convention adds to the belief that relations between Landon and Hoover are strained. Mr. Hoover's efforts in behalf of the convention are also treated coldly by Senator Borah.

It is plain, of course, that rows among these men will do the party no good, but it is unlikely that they will materially alter the republican chances for recovery of power. That possibility hinges more on what the democratic leadership does. If the way is paved for republican triumph, it will be by the mistakes of the democratic administration.

Ego at the Wheel

THE most dangerous motorist is neither the drunk nor the incompetent, but the exhibitionist—the chap who has an exaggerated sense of his own importance when he gets behind the steering wheel, and insists on driving with that sense of his importance as his ruling motive.

This verdict is returned by Dr. C. H. Watson, president of the National Safety Council. "Safety is a question of performance," says Dr. Watson. "Because people know what they should do, does not mean that they will do it."

One needs to drive only a little while to understand the truth of what Dr. Watson says. The man who weaves in and out of traffic lanes, passes other cars on curves or hills, cuts in suddenly, crashes lights and ignores stop signs is displaying all the stigmata of the man who has set himself up on a pedestal. He also provides the set-up for most of our accidents.

Ten Years Ago In Klamath

THE cattleman is not only coming back, he's back. At least those who were able to hang on through the long years of watchful waiting, for today Bill Dalton marketed a bunch of steers which brought him $99.45 each.

Many attractive prizes will be given to participants in the Klamath Potato show, according to announcement today, spurring competition among growers.

Two bugaboos of every county road engineer, rights of way and rock pits, are keeping Gene Henry, county engineer, awake nights. Anxious to get the county's $500,000 road program under way this fall, Henry has been impeded by these two obstacles.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21—The inside crowd knew as little concerning the recent pains in the pit of the stock market as you did.

These officials are supposed to be on top of every market situation, but actually their relationship to it is a good deal like that of doctor and patient. They can see symptoms, but a lot of bad guesses die on their hands.

For whatever it is worth, their latest private guess is that this is a good time to buy stocks. Apparently a lot of them followed their own guesses, as Washington brokers reported much of what they call "good buying" for cash by authorities here since the big break Monday. Of course no authority bought on borrowed money. They are too wise for that.

But their reasoning about buying-for-cash investment went something like this:

If we are not to be forced into deflation, then pessimism has gone too far. If we are to be forced into inflation, cash is not a good thing to have on hand.

ONLY GESTURES

One inner group here has been trying to get Mr. R. to "do something." They even wanted him to rush out with a statement that "everything is fundamentally sound," either at his federal reserve board dedication speech or sooner.

This group did not include the experienced financial advisers in federal reserve and the treasury. They counseled hands-off. There were only a few good things which could be done, such as (a) releasing more gold, and (b) starting heavy open market operations.

The gold move could have been made at any time. It is only a bookkeeping transaction. The open market operations would do the same thing, in a harder way, i.e., give the banks more money to lend. But these things would not force the banks to lend. Either move would only be a gesture.

A third thing mentioned was the prospect of blaming it all on the bankers and brokers again, hanging some of them in oratorical effigy. While that is considered politically desirable, and may be attempted, all realized it would not meet the situation either.

Wiseest of Wall streeters did not call for any government action. They thought their main trouble was that there has been too much of it already.

REPUDIATION

The Arkansas senatorial election was advertised as a new deal defeat, and it was. But it held a deeper and different lesson than that.

The victor, John Miller, is a man very much like Senator Joe Robinson, whom he now replaces, for Roosevelt on some things, against him on others. He was elected by the old Robinson organization, plus Mrs. Caraway, plus his own personal popularity as a level-headed fellow.

Against him was a for-Roosevelt-on-everything governor who had complimentary letters from Farley, Madame Secretary Perkins, Wallace and Harry Hopkins. The governor (Carl Bailey) obtained the nomination through the state organization and not by a party primary. He advertised his proximity to the presidential coat-tails.

So the Miller candidacy was a rebellion against the democratic machine ticket nomination of Bailey, and for the first time since anyone can remember, the ticket was unsuccessful in a southern state.

The decision upheld the hand of congressmen who have been resisting the Roosevelt-on-everything theory; it repudiated a hand-made national-machine ticket for the first time in the south.

But if anyone thinks it means Roosevelt would not carry Arkansas today he is welcome to go down there to try it. No one here will.

NO BLOW

Nathan Strauss, capable new housing administrator, was appointed only because Senator Wagner forced his selection. This was natural. The $526,000,000 new federal program for low cost housing and slums clearance got through the last congress only because Wagner pushed the administration into it.

There is little hope near the top that any great measure of economic or reform success will attend the venture. No one considers it more than a beginning which probably will not be followed up strongly.

Publicity about the appointment over-measured it as a great blow to Interior Secretary Ickes. His candidate was Howard Gray, head of PWA housing, but there was some backstage dealing beforehand which indicates Ickes will be in the front if not in the center of the housing picture. Incidentally he also seems to be back in the good graces of the White House.

Mr. R. himself, in person, had at least a little undetected hand in building up the backfire in labor ranks which is bringing John Lewis and William Green into the same room for a few hours, at least.

Out on the recent western trip groups of AFL and CIO people (not together) dropped in for a presidential handshake. The inside reports to both headquarters here indicate the president told each group separately that they should not waste their strength fighting each other, but must get together if they were not to lose their power.

FT. KLAMATH

FORT KLAMATH—Miss Malia Heath and brother Robert spent the weekend here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Heath, from Sacramento, where they are attending college.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wimer spent the weekend visiting Mrs. Wimer's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Agee, in Grants Pass.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Briscoe and Mrs. Mordetcal Hess and children were Klamath Falls visitors and shoppers on Saturday. Mrs. Marcella Rowe and daughter, Mary Patricia accompanied Mrs. Hess to Fort Klamath in the evening, and are visiting at the Hess ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lowrey moved to Ashland Sunday for the fall and winter months. They were accompanied by their granddaughter, Miss Jean Neil, who visited here over the weekend, and who is attending Southern Oregon Normal in Ashland. Miss Neil will graduate next year from the normal school.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moffatt of White River, Arizona, were visiting relatives and friends in Fort Klamath Monday of this week. Moffatts are old-time residents in this section, and lived for several years at Klamath Agency

The Family Doctor

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

YOUR skin is living tissue—not just an envelope on the outside of your body. The skin has, indeed, been called the mirror of the body because many of the conditions which affect the human being as a whole have symptoms related to the skin as one of the signs that there is something wrong.

In the skin are the nerve endings which make us aware of the sensations of cold or of warmth and which let us know when something from outside is touching the body.

The skin of a grown-up person weighs about six pounds. If spread out flat on the ground, it would cover an area of about 16 to 20 square feet. The blood vessels in the lowest layers of the skin run in waves or little hills. These are responsible for the ridges on the palms of the hands and the tips of the fingers. No two human beings have these ridges in exactly the same form.

Some forms of skin disease are quite definitely hereditary. Color of the skin is dependent largely on inheritance and to some extent on the amount of blood in the vessels beneath the skin. If for any reason these blood vessels contract so that they do not contain the normal amount of blood, the person looks pale.

The skin also regulates the temperature of the body by secreting water which is evaporated also, where Moffatt was employed by the government.

Miss Ruby Smith left by stage Monday afternoon for Grays Harbor, Wash., for a few days' visit with her father. Miss Smith is employed locally as cook at the Algoma Lumber company's hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Belleu left Monday for Coquille, where they will spend a week, visiting and attending to business matters in connection with their property there.

Mr. and Mrs. George Denton and Mr. and Mrs. Les Denton enjoyed a fine outing recently, leaving Saturday and arriving back home Tuesday after spending the time on a horseback trip to Seven lakes and across the south fork of the Rogue river. Supplies for the trip were carried by pack-horses, and an ideal camping trip was enjoyed.

The C. I. club is sponsoring an old-time Halloween dance in the club house on the evening of October 30. The public is invited to attend.

October 24 is the date set for the dedication of the new church at Chiloquin, instead of Oct. 26 as reported in Tuesday's newspaper. There will be no regular church services in Fort Klamath on that evening, but all are invited to attend special dedication services to be held in Chiloquin in the new church on that evening.
