

F.D.R. GRANTED EXTRAORDINARY POWER IN BILL

his idea of the best and most effective way of aiding Great Britain. Immediate house concurrence would permit the bill to be on Mr. Roosevelt's desk Tuesday. If Rayburn fails to get consent—one objector could block it—he plans to get the rules committee to grant right of way, permitting house debate under strict limitation on Tuesday. That would mean that Wednesday would be the earliest it could reach the president.

Only Starter
Making $1,300,000,000 worth of U. S. army and navy equipment on hand or on order available immediately, the measure authorized Mr. Roosevelt to sell, lend, lease or otherwise dispose of defense articles to any government whose defenses he deems vital to the defense of the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's aides have prepared the organization to speed the war materials to the embattled democracies, and the administration was expected to ask almost immediately for at least another $1,000,000,000 in appropriations and contract authority for the war aid program. That would be only a starter, officials indicated, and there have been many hints that the British aid program, with Greece and China participating in the benefits, might reach $10,000,000,000.

Every restrictive amendment offered by the aid bill foes, was steamrollered by the administration majority which on its closest test had a 13-vote margin.

Points Set Forth
As passed by the senate the bill authorized the president and other government department heads to:

1. Manufacture in arsenals, factories and shipyards under their jurisdiction or otherwise procure any defense article for the government of any country whose defense the president deems vital to the defense of the United States.

2. Sell, transfer title, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of defense articles to such nations after consultation with the army chief of staff and naval chief of operations, within the $1,300,000,000 limitation on equipment on hand or on order and to such an extent as future congressional appropriations or contractual authority permit.

3. To test, inspect, repair, outfit, recondition, or otherwise place in good working order defense articles transferred to foreign governments. This would permit, for example, the repair of British warships in U. S. navy yards.

4. To communicate to foreign governments confidential defense information concerning war equipment provided them.

5. To release for export defense articles.
Powers granted under the bill automatically expire June 30, 1943, or sooner if congress by a concurrent resolution—requiring only a majority vote and not subject to a presidential veto—decides that the measure no longer is necessary to promote U. S. defenses. Contracts for war aid must be completed before July 1, 1946.

To allay some fears that the bill might bring the country closer to war, the administration wrote into the measure declarations that nothing in the bill shall be construed to authorize U. S. naval conveying of merchant ships, the entrance of American ships into war combat zones, or to change existing laws relating to the movement of the army and navy.

More Pay Asked For Box Workers

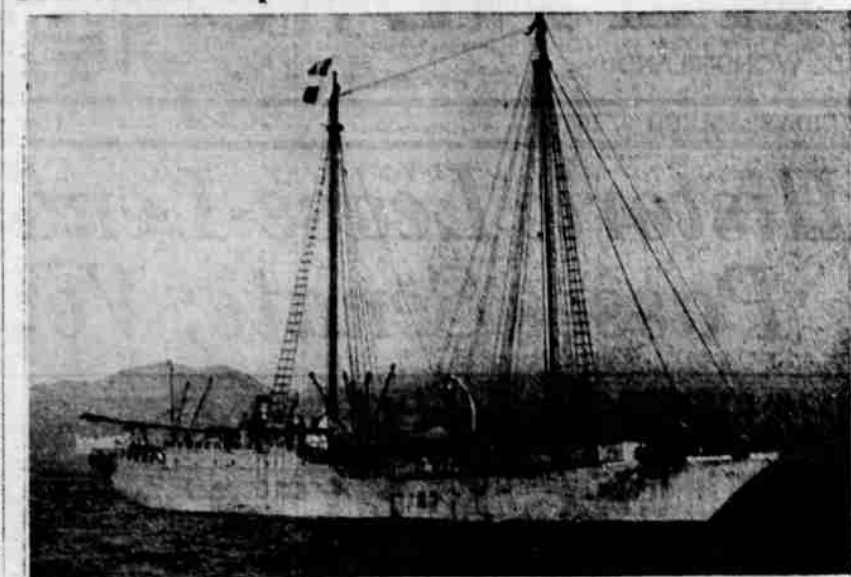

EUGENE, Ore., March 8 (AP)—Kenneth Davis, Portland, secretary of the Northwest District Council of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union, AFL, today called for a program to bring box-workers' wages up to the level of other workers in the lumber industry.

He told 40 delegates from 17 union locals in Washington, Oregon and northern California that the box and shook industry has been the "step-child" of the lumber industry. They were gathered in the box workers annual northwest convention.

Peter E. Terzick, Seattle editor, said a new wage policy must be formulated on an industry-wide basis to eliminate inequalities. Wages of box and shook workers vary from a 62¢ cent high to a low of 45 cents an hour, Terzick said.

The delivery dates were not disclosed.

The navy department announced a $552 contract for painting and for erection of a fence at the naval radio station, Astoria, was awarded to the Cyclone Fence company, Portland, which was given 120 days to complete the work.

Klamath Guard Sergeant Dies

Word has been received here of the sudden death of Ira M. Coleman, staff sergeant of Klamath's Battery C, at Fort Stevens, on Friday. Sergeant Coleman only recently visited in Klamath Falls on leave from Fort Stevens. His wife, Louise, lives here.

Coleman was a past president of the Central Labor council and was long active in the barbers' union. He was a barber for several years at Murphy's. He was active in the American Legion, and a member of the drum corps. He was a member of the Elks, Masons and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He went with Battery C to Fort Stevens last year when the national guard was called into the army.
Funeral services for Sergeant Coleman will be held at the Elks lodge on Tuesday at 2 p. m., with officers of the lodge officiating and Ward's in charge. Interment will be at Corvallis.
The Legion drum corps will take part in the services, and all senior drum corps members were asked to be at the Legion hall at 1 p. m. Tuesday.

HOUSE BLOCKS TAX ON SALES

alms giving, but they are an obligation to the old folks.

"Painless" Levy
Loneragan said there is need for property tax relief because of the large number of property tax foreclosures in every county. "The sales tax," Loneragan said, "is the most painless tax that has ever been devised by man. We can't tax incomes or business any more without doing great damage to the tax structure."

The defeat of the bill indicates there will be no new tax legislation approved this session. Rep. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Multnomah), opening the democratic attack, said "We all want to help the old people, but let's do it now. This bill, even if the people approved it, wouldn't become law until 1943. But the people five years ago voted 6 to 1 against it."

Neuberger advocated a tax on business that would take effect immediately.

The house acted late yesterday on measures, ranging from diversion of the gasoline tax to state control of so-called "mixer clubs."

It also adopted a resolution to end the session by 11 p. m. next Tuesday. Rep. Frank Loneragan (R-Multnomah), house floor leader, explained the resolution was only a "gesture," and predicted adjournment by Thursday (60th day).

The League of Oregon Cities-sponsored bill to distribute five per cent of highway revenues for street maintenance was passed, 35 to 22, and sent to the senate.

By a 47 to 9 vote, the house approved a measure to give the state liquor control commission authority to regulate clubs in which drinks are mixed.

Rep. Harry D. Boivin (D-Klamath) asserted that "prohibition with its resultant bootlegging" would be back unless the bill was passed.

A senate bill to give the state game commission power to close seasons and bag limits was passed by the house with only six negative votes. These powers have been reserved to the legislature.

A house-approved bill to require motorists to prove their financial responsibility after accidents was killed in the senate, 23 to 4, after Sen. W. H. Strayer (D-Baker) charged the measure was "drawn and intended for the benefit of the insurance business."

in sight for more than 24 hours. The weather bureau forecast light snow in the new area continuing tomorrow.

At least four traffic accident deaths were attributed to the storm up to 11 a. m. Saturday. In New York City one man was fatally injured and his wife was hurt when, blinded by the storm, they walked into the path of an automobile.

By mid-morning, the central coastal area saw sleet and rain take the place of snow at intervals. Icing conditions made travel hazardous.

Three Missing
Air flights, including the Atlantic clipper's takeoff to Lisbon, were cancelled. The United States line America was delayed eight hours before visibility conditions permitted her to sail for California at dawn.

At La Guardia field, New York, a record 16-inch fall paralyzed all air traffic to and from the city.

Three boys were missing in two small boats in the Severn river in Maryland.

The nation's capital by dawn was covered with 10 inches of snow, a record for the season. Boston expected 12 inches or more snow and a forecast of strong winds caused Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts to prepare for a blizzard.

Skating Good Saturday At Crater Lake

Skating in Crater Lake national park Saturday was good on sunny slopes but poor in the shade where snow still wore an icy crust. Weather was clear and warm with visibility unlimited. The mercury stood at about 50.

All slopes are icy in the early morning and late afternoon, Ranger Jack Frost said Saturday afternoon, but the ice disappears shortly after the sun hits.

Snow has not yet reached spring, or corn condition, Frost stated, but is fast approaching it.
