ANDERSON GOES ON TRIAL HERE EARLY MONDAY

Names of 12 additional veniremen were drawn Saturday in preparation for the opening Monday of the trial of James Quentin Anderson, young part Indian charged with first degree murder in the death of Jerry Zulkoski on January 23. It is expected most or all of Monday will be required to obtain a jury in the case, second murder trial here since Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg assumed office.

The new veniremen are Fred C. Bamber, Will Humphrey, Huntington Taylor, J. W. Dolan, Frank L. Uhrine, Robert Odell, Ralph Hill and Roland K. King, all of Klamath Falls; Charles Hodges, Merrill; James Newsom, Oleno, Ralph Puckett, Keno, Stewart Nicholson, Fort Klamath, Dayton E. Van Vactor will act as special deputy district attorney in charge of the prosecution of Anderson. The young defendant will be represented by J. C. O'Neill and E. E. Driscoll.

Zulkoski's body was found beside the Lak-view highway near Oleno on the morning of January 23. Later, Sheriff Lloyd Low arrested young Anderson at the home of his father, O. T. (Buck) Anderson, near Beatty. Zulkoski was a white man who had been employed at the Anderson place. His recent permanent home was in Ord, Neb. It is anticipated that self-defense will be featured in the effort of counsel to prevent conviction of young Anderson, who has assertedly admitted he was with Zulkoski in a truck at the time the former Nebraskan was shot.

MUSIC FOR KIWANIS

(Bend Bulletin)

It was a successful conference held here by Kiwanis under the direction of its able lieutenant-governor, Phil Hitchcock, but let us remark that, as far as the evening session at the Pilot Butte inn was concerned, the school musicians of Bend and Klamath Falls, who appeared on the program last night, "stole the show." Klamath's young trumpeters played extremely difficult selections, and played them well. Bend's a capella choir we believe to be one of the outstanding musical organizations of the northwest. We may have said something of the sort before and it may be that we have not taken in enough territory when we said it. It is sufficient to mention now that the choir was at its best last night, and that its performance was enhanced by a talented young cornetist, Earl Mosen, in one of the numbers, as well as by the solo parts taken by Betty Joe Rogers.

Bend is proud of its high school musicians and of Homer Waltz, the man who has developed them as an organization. And, we imagine, Klamath Falls feels much the same way in regard toward its musical director, Charles Stanfield, and the boys and girls whom he instructs.

German Figures On Capture Disputed

LONDON, April 12 (AP)—Reuters (British) news agency reported from Athens today a statement by a semi-official Athens news agency branding as "most exaggerated" reports that the number of Greek troops cut off and captured east of the Vardar river exceeded 80,000.

"Greek forces in this area were much smaller than this and furthermore, thousands of them were able to withdraw in time and reach free Greek territory," the report said.

EASTER

By EARL WHITLOCK
A little less than 2000 years ago, Jesus, the Christ, arose from his tomb, spoke to his disciples, showed them the cruel wounds in his hands and side, and so left us proof of the beautiful fact of eternal life.

Scientists and students of Oriental lore dispute as to the exact year in which this stupendous event occurred. That is, after all, a matter of small moment, a proper subject for the discussions of theologians. The important thing is that it DID happen and that our entire western civilization has been based upon it. Your life and mine today are infinitely different from, infinitely better than the lives we should have led without this firm faith in the Eternal Plan.

And the fact that today, supposedly Christian nations are cruelly tearing at each other's throats, does not prove Christianity unsound. It merely demonstrates again what has been repeatedly demonstrated before—that mankind has not yet developed sufficiently to learn the lessons of kindness, forbearance and brotherly love which Jesus taught.

Next week Mr. Whitlock, of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home, will comment on "A Reputation for Fair Prices."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

by PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 12—The Germans ruined the Yugoslav army upon precisely the same trick which fooled the French. The very same Nazi army crowd which knifed through Sedan and severed the French armies, handled the job. The mechanized units which pushed through the impregnable passes on the Bulgarian border were directly under General Von Kleist who staged the surprise of the French Ardennes with approximately the same units.

They got through the impassable passes simply by forcing the most impassable first. Here was a defile so narrow tanks could not pass. Appreciating this, the Yugoslavs left it protected by a very small force. The Nazis conquered the isolated spot easily and slipped through motorcycle units in single file.

On the other side of the mountains these joined with parachute troops to take the strongly defended neighboring passes from their undefended rear. Within 24 hours the larger passes had thus been opened up and the tanks were streaming down across the sparsely manned southern half of the country. All this while the bulk of the Yugoslav army was in the north carrying out a carefully prepared defense plan founded on suppositions exactly the reverse of what the Germans did.

The Yugoslavs figured their unfortified border with Rumania would naturally be attacked first. It was their obvious weakness. They planned to give way slowly and fall back upon their strong defense line in the mountains to the southwest. But by the time they were ready for this the mechanized Nazi scissors had already cut their southern communications and rail lines. They were doomed.

STUPIDITY BLAMED

As the detailed stories of these German successes come out, months after the event, it becomes clear that the mechanized German monsters that are supposed to hammer down their adversaries with brute force, are far from supernatural. The Nazis have used their wits more than their fists. The only thing unconquerable about them has been the stupidity of their opponents.

SEDAN EXPLAINED

Now comes the first authentic details of what happened at Sedan in a study by Capt Paul Thompson, U.S.A. (April "Infantry Journal," circulated in the military trade). He looked into German, French and Swiss accounts and found no evidence of French treason or irresistible German power but an amazing amount of French miscalculation.

Like the Yugoslavs with their passes, the French thought that the Ardennes hilly forest terrain offered insurmountable obstacles for mechanized units. They only had their horse units back to the line of the Meuse river. The Germans slaughtered the horse units in small combats near the Luxembourg border and arrived, otherwise unopposed, at the Meuse river three days after the invasion started.

The French Ninth army was to defend the Meuse, but its orders required five days to get the army up to the defense line. Consequently the Germans were on the east bank before the French had manned the west bank.

The French did not sell out. The bridges were blown up, but with the west bank only defended in spots, the Germans forded in rubber boats and set up pontoon bridges. They were able to take some of the French defensive positions from the rear.

To colossalize this otherwise stupendous French inefficiency, the tanks of the Ninth army finally arrived somewhat off the scene of battle on the fifth day (they had been misdirected). Thereupon they promptly ran out of gas. The tanks were abandoned and seized by the Germans without a shot.

Only a few French aircraft appeared in this "impregnable" zone. German dive bombers appeared on the second day, but there was really not much fighting to be done. The main French forces were off to the north where they expected the main blow. The Germans did not even have time to bring up their own artillery. Their success was far greater than their most optimistic calculations. After the breakthrough, all was lost for the British and French.

SPY WORK

Root secret of these successes was superior advance spy work. German tourists had gone over the ground in detail. The Germans knew what spots were defended and how strongly. They shrewdly spied out the soft spot and contrived mechanical means to use it.

What authorities here now would like to know is whether Britain has overlooked anything.

Weekend Roundup

IN a world shocked by hatreds and mass bloodshed, the faithful will pause on Sunday, Easter day, with the thought that if the words of the Man of Peace had been heeded, "this all would not have been."

The beautiful story of Easter, the story of Christ triumphant, carries hope for the distressed and troubled in this historic year of 1941. It will be re-told in song and pageant and sermon in thousands of churches over America, and in our own Midland Empire churches, the preparations have been in keeping with the great significance of the day.

Those who go to church on Easter will profit by it.

St. Matthew's story of the first Easter runs like this: "In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

"And behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it.

"His countenance was like lightning, and raiment white as snow. And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered, fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. "He is not here; for he is risen, as he said . . ."

Read it again, before turning to the depressing news of the day.

Information from the Balkans as this is written continues on a disturbing key. The German advance has moved with new success, and axis and British troops are reportedly engaged in a huge struggle in the Phlorina area of Greece. Yugoslav resistance appears to be rapidly collapsing. There is nothing in the situation, insofar as it has been told in the news, that is encouraging to those in sympathy with the allies.

Meanwhile, along the same line, runs a story that the British have lost much that they gained in their recent brilliant African campaign against the Italians. It is possible a major battle is in the making there, also. None of it makes pleasant reading.

The Russian mystery thickens, if that is possible. Yugoslavia's premier was reported on a mission of some kind to Moscow. Moscow's military organ, the Red Star, recently made some favorable comment on Yugoslavia's courage, and it is remembered that Russia and Yugoslavia signed a non-aggression pact just before the recent hostilities broke out.

But let's remain skeptical about any possibility of Russian help for Yugoslavia. The Russian Bear hasn't shown any disposition yet to bestir himself by anyone being over-run by the German machine. And the time to help Yugoslavia already is slipping speedily into the past. —M. E.
