

FORCES CARRY OUT RETREAT FROM ALBANIA

movements, according to the general headquarters plan, were continued in perfect order. The Italians attempted to approach our lines in the Argyrokastron region but were stopped by violent and accurate artillery and mortar fire.

LONDON, April 19 (AP)—The British public was being conditioned tonight to face the possibility of "another Dunkirk" in Greece although thus far, it was said officially, the Greco-British lines are holding well against German assault.

The British and Greeks started to withdraw yesterday to new defense lines, believed to be about 30 miles south of the line based on Mount Olympus.

There has been no confirmation here, as yet, of the German claims Olympus and Larisa have been captured.

It was said the allied troops are falling back slowly, inflicting severe losses on the Germans as they retire.

BERLIN, April 19 (AP)—The German high command announced today the capture of Larisa, 40 miles south of Mount Olympus, eastern anchor of the Greek-British defense line.

Larisa, smashed by a recent earthquake and by bombings, is an important junction on the main rail line leading from Salonika to Athens.

ATHENS, Greece, April 19 (2:25 P. M.—4:25 A. M. PST)—(P)—Britain's imperial forces in Greece, declaring their front nowhere had been penetrated, announced today that they had repulsed a heavy Nazi attack by armored formations and masses of infantry with "severe" losses.

"Despite all efforts, our front nowhere has been penetrated," said a communique.

It added that many prisoners had been taken.

Passes Hold The imperial troops were reported in action along the entire front as waves of German infantry tried vainly to force a way up the mountains guarding the passes in the face of murderous fire.

Observers said the slopes were strewn with dead and wounded Nazi blitzmen.

The mountainous country and stout resistance has put Nazi mechanized warfare in reverse, observers said.

Fight on Foot

Instead of the German panzer columns breaking through to clear the roads for the infantry, Hitler's legions now must fight their way on foot ahead of the tanks, it was said.

As King George II worked to shape a new government—possibly a military cabinet—in an overnight change necessitated by the death of Premier Alexandros Korizis, word from the north indicated fighting had intensified along the entire defense line.

Lines Unchanged All reports from the front up until noon today indicated the allied lines were unchanged in the past 12 hours, despite relentless Nazi pressure.

"We mow them down by the hundreds as they try to climb the steep mountain sides, but as soon as one wave is thrown back another pushes forward," said a military officer.

Losses Tremendous "Their losses are tremendous, unequalled, I believe, by anything they have suffered in the European war to date."

This source said the Nazis were bringing up heavy guns to supplement the bombardment by their stukas, which fly over 20 and 30 at a time.

The British army headquarters here declared repeated Nazi attacks by armored formations and infantry "have been repulsed" and said the attackers failed to penetrate the line at a single point.

"Despite all efforts, our front has nowhere been penetrated and our flanks nowhere turned," a communique said.

The German high command reported today that Larisa, Greek city 40 miles south of Mount Olympus, where British troops had been reported fighting, had been taken and that the swastika had been hoisted on Mount Olympus.

"Imperial forces are in contact along the whole front," the communique continued. "Heavy attacks by armored formations and infantry have been repulsed and many prisoners taken. Enemy casualties are severe."

An Australian detachment, surrounded by a German battalion near Servia, northwest of Olympus, was reported to have fought its way back to British lines, taking 150 prisoners. The Germans were said to have lost 300 dead.

Buck Hammer Named KUHS Football Coach

(Continued from Page One) structor since his graduation from Oregon State college in 1932 has been remarkable. Following a year in professional football with the Boston Redskins and the Providence (R. I.) Steamrollers, Hammer served for two years as head coach at the Wheeler, Ore., high school and one year at the Rainier, Ore., school.

In the three years his teams won 22 games, lost 3 and tied two. Both his Wheeler squads captured conference championships and in 1934 were unbeaten, untied and unscored upon in eight games. During that year the team averaged a point a minute. The Rainier eleven finished second in its conference in 1933.

Hammer was an outstanding lineman during his college days and played in the annual Shrine East-West game January 1, 1932.

The new head mentor is married, the father of one child and lives at 911 North Eighth street.

LONDON GIVEN BIRTHDAY RAID

3. It became known that the highest military authorities gave the strictest orders to spare not only Athens, but all other Greek cultural centers.

KORIZIS DEATH HELD SUICIDE; KING CONTROLS

(Continued from Page One) of the cabinet will be announced tomorrow and they will be sworn in and take over their duties immediately. It was said that the cabinet would be a small, centralized group.

An official communique said: "This afternoon the king finished his talks for the formation of the new government."

All Posts Filled This was thought to indicate that he had filled all posts. The communique added that the government "will be of military nature."

The death of Korizis was revealed as a suicide only tonight. Korizis, bitterly depressed by the suffering which war had brought to Greece, took his life in a moment of mental depression, it was believed by his friends.

Korizis was the second Balkan premier within a little more than a fortnight to take his own life.

Immediately before the start of the German offensive against Greece and Yugoslavia, Count Paul Teleki, premier of Hungary, shot himself because, it was believed, he would not join Germany in an attack upon Yugoslavia.

Dark Hour In the dark hours of Korizis suicide and Germany's heavy offensive against this small country King George II personally took the helm of government today and pledged himself to lead the nation to victory.

King George named the tall, energetic former mayor of Athens, Costas Kottilas, vice premier, but it was indicated a military cabinet would be formed because of Kottilas' difficulty in forming a civilian list.

Korizis was given a state funeral today to the accompaniment of crackling anti-aircraft fire and the roar of fighter planes which went into action against German aircraft that flew over the outskirts of Athens.

The funeral ceremonies were held in the Athens cathedral at 1 p. m. where only two and a half months ago similar services were conducted for Gen. John Metaxas, Greece's strong man and Korizis' predecessor.

By The Associated Press ATHENS, Greece April 19—King George II conferred today with a stream of political and military leaders in an effort to form a new Greek government as solid masses of gray green uniformed German troops pushed against the allied Olympus line in a manner reminiscent of the World War's Verdun.

Despite the reshuffling of the government made necessary by the unexpected death yesterday of Premier Alexandros Korizis, the capital was quiet and orderly. Major General Kristos Kavrakos was named military governor of Athens during the crucial period to insure stability.

The burden of forming the new government was thrust on King George by the failure of Kostas Kotzias to do so.

King George earlier had assumed wartime control of the government as head of the council of ministers, but entrusted to Kotzias the task of forming a new cabinet.

The scholarly banker, Korizis, whose death yesterday afternoon was announced to his countrymen late last night, had succeeded the late Gen. John Metaxas as premier of war-time Greece, who died Jan. 29.

Thus twice within 80 days death had disrupted Greece's government as the little nation fought desperately for life.

Just as Korizis vowed to lead on undaunted in the fight with Italy which began under General Metaxas, Greece's now vice premier pledged his nation to stand firm now against the military might of the axis.

Names of artists, with the exception of Robeson will not be announced until the return of signed contracts from New York.

Woman Novelist Commits Suicide

LONDON, April 19 (AP)—Dr. E. F. Hoare, coroner at New Haven, Sussex, gave a verdict of suicide today in the drowning of Mrs. Virginia Woolf, British novelist who was twice bombed from her home. Her body was recovered last night from the river Ouse near her weekend house at Lewes.

The coroner read a note which Mrs. Woolf left for her husband, Leonard.

"I have a feeling I shall go mad," the note said. "I cannot go on any longer in these terrible times. I hear voices and cannot concentrate on my work. I have fought against it but cannot fight any longer. I owe all my happiness to you but cannot go on and spoil your life."

British Women to Register in Labor Draft for Industry

LONDON, April 19 (P)—A quarter-million women of 20 and 21 are expected to register today in England's first conscription of feminine labor for war industries.

When Labor Minister Ernest Bevin announced the plan to draft women workers March 16, he declared the registration call was to be heeded equally in the drawing room and the laundry room.

The only exemptions will be for women already serving with the nursing service, full-time air raid precautions and civil defense volunteers and students at universities, technical and professional schools.

Two or three weeks will be required for classification of today's registrants before the ministry of labor begins interviewing those who will best fit into the nation's humming industrial machine.
