Some choice fine territory wool in original bags was sold at $1.03-1.05 scoured basis.

Northwest Expects Major Role in Defense Industry

By PAUL F. EWING
PORTLAND, Ore., April 24 (The Special News Service)—The Pacific Northwest is the dark-horse entry in the national rearmament industries race, but the boys in the know are betting she'll finish in the money.

While the bulk of vital plants have mushroomed in the east, the northwest has been adding generators at Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams and quietly taking stock of its unexploited minerals.

The region has iron ore adaptable to electric smelting, chromite, chromite sands, manganese, alumina for aluminum, phosphate rock for phosphorus and phosphates, magnesite for magnesium which metallurgists call "the metal of the future," metallurgical coal, limestone, nickel, molybdenum, tungsten, antimony, quicksilver, silica, copper, zinc and lead.

All are as necessary to Uncle Sam's military machine as ketchup and cantonments.

Add low-cost power from the government's huge Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams — at present the only large blocks of electrical energy available in the United States — and you have the reason why the experts are sure the west's long-awaited industrial boom is on.

Utilizing Columbia basin power, the northwest has built or is building two large aluminum factories which are expected to be producing 22,000,000,000 of aluminum annually by the summer of 1942; two ferro-alloy plants; three chemical plants, one producing toluol for explosives, another carbide, and the third chlorate and chlorine derivatives.

There are copper refineries at Tacoma, Wash., and Great Falls, Mont. Electrolytic zinc is produced at Kellogg, Idaho, and at Anaconda and Great Falls, Mont.

In immediate prospect are more aluminum plants, possibly utilizing the alumina of the west; another electrolytic zinc plant; a plant for high-grade iron and steel; plants for producing electrolytic manganese and chromium; a second carbide plant also producing ferro-alloy, and an electric furnace magnesium plant.

Large quantities of minerals on the war department's critical list—items in which there may be a deficiency—also come from abroad, but at least three of them, asbestos, platinum and titanium, are found in Oregon and the latter two are present in commercial quantities.

Minor miracles of metallurgy are providing access to new supplies for some of the metals.

But what of power? The total output of Bonneville, 518,400 kilowatts, can be sold

81 EXAMINED FOR AIRCRAFT METAL SCHOOL

Eighty-one applicants for entrance to the new aircraft sheet metal school soon to be established in Klamath Falls appeared at the Klamath Union high school to take aptitude tests given by H. F. Blackmore of the Lockheed Aircraft company Wednesday night.

The turnout, far above local expectations, represented about 80 per cent of the total of 102 applications filled out following announcement of the training class last Friday. It was believed most of those who did not appear for the exams were unable to do so because of night work. Members of the local defense council, under whose jurisdiction the school is being held, said that future tests would be given both during the day and at night.

Results of the examinations will be available by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, according to Jack Almeter of the Oregon state employment service. The exams were sent to Medford Thursday, from where they will be airmailed to Los Angeles for grading.

Actual instruction will begin immediately after the results are known, it was said. Equipment for the workshop is here and in process of being installed in the high school gymnasium workshops.

Approximately 20 students will be placed in each class and enough classes held to handle all those who qualify.

Meanwhile, Keith Ambrose, chairman of the youth defense council, urged all men who wished to apply to do so. When enough applications are in to make up another class, it will be formed regardless of whether the present classes are finished.

It was also pointed out that all those eligible for NYA projects are qualified to enroll for the sheet metal class. If they can not be placed here, they will be sent to other sections of the state where schools are now being held.

ANALYST TAKES STOCK OF NAZI BALKAN DRIVE

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press Writer

Even as the final throes of defeat grip the allies in the battle of Greece the London press is raising the call for an accounting of Britain's whole Balkan adventure, and this is being echoed in Australia, whose sons have played such a heroic and bloody part in holding the right wing of the allied line.

Certainly there are some points that can stand a bit of clearing up. One of the chief questions which appears to have been puzzling America was rather well summed up by a highly placed newspaperman who flung at me with some asperity:

"What I want to know is why the deuce the British got mixed up in this Balkan mess when they must have known from the start that the chances were they would be smashed."

Well, that's a fair query, so let's see what we can make of it. First off, strange though it seems, the British participation has been largely for political rather than military reasons. It's true that the odds were greatly against the allies being able to stop the Hitlerite war-machine, although there was always the chance that luck might give them a break, and permit the opening of a new front against the Germans.

However, the fundamental reason for Britain's action lay in the fact that she had given her bond to aid Greece against aggression. The Greeks didn't need any help to give the fascists a beating, but when the nazis started to pour a million men down through the mountain passes the Hellenes were ready for the British to fulfill their obligation.

Now if there are cynical readers who believe that the English would keep their word only if it served their own purpose, there is this to consider: What would world opinion have said of Britons if they had run out on their little ally? The answer is that it might have cost John Bull every friend he had.

Anyway, John kept his bond. Things had been going so well in Libya that he could release troops for the Balkan show.

He appears to have landed some sixty to eighty thousand men with full equipment in Greece and was preparing to send many more when without warning the Germans started their whirlwind conquest of the Libyan territory which the British had so recently conquered. That halted the sending of more troops to Greece, although it's doubtful whether the outcome would have been much different had the British been able to provide double the number.

The credit side of the allied

Question?

This is Secretary of State Earl Snell, whose political plans are the subject of wide conjecture over the state. Mr. Snell divulged no secrets, however, when he visited here a few days ago to give the address of welcome at the state convention of Job's Daughters. He is most worshipful grand master of the grand lodge of Oregon Masons. Governorship, congress and the senate are posts mentioned in political circles as having attraction for Snell.

balance sheet does look slim, but if you take the trouble to examine it more closely you will find some surprising items which are favorable for instance:

Herr Hitler has been forced against his will to fight for something which he had expected to get for nothing. Without the Yugoslav, Greek and British resistance he would have been able to achieve his conquest of these Balkan states by telephone—as he is now trying to do with Turkey and Spain.

The Balkan upheaval has interrupted the smooth run of the crucial operation of the whole war.

The nazis have lost heavily in casualties and in equipment. They have disrupted agriculture throughout the great food producing countries of the Balkans. Yugoslavia is a cripple on their hands—her fertile lands untilled, her industries stopped, her communications destroyed or dislocated.

Extension Unit News

Weyerhaeuser Camp 4
Weyerhaeuser Camp 4 Home Extension Unit met at the home of Mrs. F. Steele on April 17, with 10 members present. During the morning session program planning for next year was discussed, each member making one suggestion for this program. Following noon luncheon, an interesting discussion and demonstration on "Care of the Feet" was given by Mrs. H. H. Ogle and Mrs. F. Steele. A nominating committee was elected, with Mrs. Tenney as chairman.

The subject for next meeting, May 15, will be "Weight Control," meeting place to be named later.

The girl who gets invited out to dinner three nights a week is convinced that there's a lot of food value in dates.
