What Counts Now

SPEAKING at the state junior chamber of commerce convention here Sunday, National Junior Chamber President Mark Matthews made a strong appeal for industrial unity in the United States. "Courage and valor avail nothing unless we are equipped with the modern instruments of warfare," said Mr. Matthews.

He is right. The present wars are not fought so much on the battlefields as in the factories and the farming fields. Fail there, and failure on the field of battle is a foregone conclusion. Win there, and we may not have to go to battlefields at all.

That is the premise back of the sincere appeals for unity that ring through the United States these days. That is why it is necessary to dissolve prejudices and antagonisms, and raise in their place tolerance and good will and cooperation.

That is why an issue that would have looked all important two or five years ago may not, in the present emergency, be worth arguing about. That is why a method of settling a question that was sound and acceptable under ordinary circumstances may be better replaced with one that keeps the wheels whirling while points at issue are being ironed out.

In short, that is why Americans must unite in work for a single purpose in the short time that is afforded them to do a mighty job.

Can It Endure?

"REMEMBER, Greeks, this too will pass." So said the newspapers to the people of Athens as they awaited the mechanized legions of Hitler. And in Athens there was no frenzy as the Germans came. Stoically, the Greeks watched and said nothing.

One people after another has been crushed under the advance of Hitler's military might. There is a plan, we are told, to quench the last spark of pride that may be left in these peoples, and to subjugate them to the will of their masters and the purposes of the "new order."

One wonders if it can be done. History holds nothing that promises success for such an enterprise. In the black night that is Europe today, one suspects there are millions who are waiting and hating. Can anything enduring be built on such a foundation?

Girls League To Hold Mothers' Tea At Lakeview

the Paisley and Lakeview high school bands, songs by the elementary children and a quartet from the Southern Oregon College of Education at Ashland.

Modoc Point Man Injured in Auto Wreck Saturday

Roscoe Wooten, about 50, living near Modoc Point, is in Hillside hospital in a serious condition as the result of an automobile accident late Saturday night one mile north of Modoc Point. Wooten had not regained consciousness by early Tuesday morning. He is suffering from head injuries and shoulder hurts. It is understood that Denver Miller, Modoc Point, reached the scene of the accident and removed Wooten to the hospital. Wooten was alone at the time of the crash and it is thought his car went out of control and left the highway where it overturned.

Hatched in May, a fly could have five million million descendants by September.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 5—The Italian press, which works on push buttons from the German controlled propaganda ministry, has been hinting a surprise attack on our fleet might result from Mr. Roosevelt's stronger sea policy.

It may now be told that something of a scare developed here in January or February when our people picked up more convincing hints along the same line. A Japanese air or submarine attack on our fleet, then partially bottled in Hawaii, was greatly feared. That was when Mr. Roosevelt suddenly rushed those bombing planes to Hawaii.

Extensive additional air scouting precautions have been taken (not only in the Pacific) which should eliminate the possibility of a surprise disaster.

SHIP POOL

Not even the house merchant marine committee has been able to find out confidentially much more than you know about the new pooling of 2,000,000 tons of American ship tonnage for British aid. The amount involved is more than a fourth of our total tonnage (7,500,000), will affect 250 to 300 ships.

Some legislators, partly in the know, expect Britain will get the faster and larger American ships while the ugly ducklings (including seized axis ships) will be used as substitutes in our coastwise trade. They do not consider it unlikely that the seized vessels, with a new coat of paint and a new name, will be put into effective service.

Some economic dislocations are sure to follow. Freight rates and shipping facilities for sugar, coffee, cocoa, and other goods from South America and the Far East are bound to be affected. The initial removal of 50 tankers will surely cause increased use of railroad tank cars and pipelines, with possible effects on gasoline prices.

Maritime commission is trying to create as little dislocation as possible by substituting something for everything they take away.

FIELDS SAVED

The Germans did not bomb the Yugoslav and Greek airports as was done in Poland, the lowlands and France. They used machine guns instead. Reason: Their bombs so devastated enemy fields earlier in the war that weeks of German restoration were required to put them to Nazi use after the conquest. Machine gunning saves them the trouble of filling the craters.

By the third day of the attack on Yugoslavia, they had destroyed 50 per cent of the air force. By the fourth day they had destroyed 75 per cent.

REPLY TO TANKS

An American-developed answer to the German tank may be furnished by the "blitz buggy." This is a miniature truck with four-wheel drive, no armor, and no gadgets, capable of carrying three men and towing an anti-tank gun. They cost only $600 and can be turned out by thousands.

Tests suggest they are capable of swarming over Panzer divisions, affording little more target than a mosquito.

PLUGS GAPS

The British have been bewildered by the tank opposition on three occasions — in the mountains of the Balkans, the desert of North Africa, and the lowlands of Holland. Three times within a year on three different types of terrain they have found it impossible to stop the plane-tank team. Their trouble has been that they can't tell in advance where the tanks are likely to break through, and the scattering of anti-tank guns along the long

Navy Fliers Safe As Plane Crashes

SAN DIEGO, Calif., May 5—Two navy fliers parachuted to safety in the ocean today after their dive bomber developed trouble at a high altitude and crashed over the international line near Tijuana, Mex. The plane was demolished.

The fliers, Enns M. P. Bohman, Lewiston, Ida., and J. C. Sereton, North Little Rock, Ark., swam to shore on the American side of the border. Neither was injured. Reports from Tijuana said salvage operations were under way there.
