Women Can Help to Keep Food Prices From Extra Increases

William S. Knudsen, director general, office of production management, says we are all in the army now. So we are, every man, woman and child in the United States. We know that certain commodity prices must go up because of the costs of national defense. But we know also that some unpatriotic producers may try to take advantage of our patriotism and jump prices unreasonably. Against such practices every woman who buys food for her family must be on guard.

Harriet Elliott, consumer commissioner of the national defense advisory commission, recently recommended that anticipated cost increases which have not yet materialized should not be made the basis for price advances; that when prices of new goods advance, inventories be averaged rather than marked up to the new level; that rigid adherence to the practice of traditional rates of mark-up should be discouraged, unless it can be shown that costs have advanced by an equivalent amount.

Looking at the national food picture as a whole we get a working idea of how food supplies for the next few months will run.

MEATS
Prices, particularly for pork, probably will continue for the next few months at a higher level than last year. Pork supplies are expected to be much smaller than last spring, but beef and lamb supplies may be slightly larger.

FRUITS
Citrus fruits and apples are expected to be more abundant and lower in price than last spring.

VEGETABLES
Recent curtailment in marketings seems to be temporary, and the outlook is for much more vegetables than a year ago.

DAIRY PRODUCTS
Record milk production the past few months indicates that supply will continue to be larger than last spring.

POULTRY
Supplies are expected to decline seasonally through the spring months and to be smaller than a year ago.

POTATOES
New and old potatoes probably will be considerably more plentiful than last spring, but much smaller sweet potato supplies are expected.

MENU
BREAKFAST: Prunes in orange juice, cracked-wheat muffins, bacon, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Cream of potato and onion soup, whole-wheat bread, jam turnovers, tea, milk.
DINNER: Corned beef hash, poached egg, spinach, hard rolls, apple pie, coffee, milk.
