

LOGGERS PLAN BIG CONCLAVE FOR WEEKEND

EUGENE, May 12 (Special)—Loggers from all parts of Oregon will gather in Eugene Friday and Saturday for the third annual Willamette Valley Logging conference.

Early registration figures indicate attendance will be largest in the history of the conference, H. J. Cox, secretary of the Willamette Valley Lumberman's association, said today.

Realization of the value of the lumber industry to national defense is reflected in the program which will emphasize the problems the industry faces under present day conditions. Bert C. Ross, president, pointed out.

Sessions, which are to be held in the Osburn hotel, will open Friday morning at 9:30, with an address of welcome by Mayor Elisha Large of Eugene. Stewart Holbrook, noted author of logging stories, will speak at the Friday night loggers' dinner. "Recent Legislation Affecting Logging and Forest Practice," will be the topic of an address to be given Saturday morning by Warren Tilton, Seattle, representing the West Coast Lumberman's association.

Machinery display will be the largest in the history of the conference, Arthur W. Priaulx, exhibition manager, indicated. More than 40 logging machinery and equipment firms have planned displays at the meeting.

Wives of the logger delegates will hold a "Loggerette" dinner Friday night in the dining room of the Eugene hotel. Olive Barber, Coos bay writer, will be the featured speaker.

Commander To Talk State Guard Plan With Governor

SALEM, May 12 (AP)—Major General E. D. Peek of San Francisco, commanding general of the ninth corps area, will confer late today with Gov. Charles A. Sprague, probably on whether the governor should create a state guard to replace the national guard while it is in federal service.

The legislature authorized the governor to organize such a force, but the governor said he would not do so unless there were a grave emergency which could not be handled by federal troops or by state police.

PETAINE'S POOR HEALTH EYED BY ENGLAND

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Britain must be experiencing a period of intense concern pending a clearing up of the report that Marshal Petain, French chief of state, is suffering from a serious kidney ailment, since anything that would remove the aged soldier-statesman from the political arena might easily be a catastrophe for the allied cause.

This report was published in an English newspaper yesterday, and later the Berlin radio denied it. However, whether it be true or not, the question of this 85-year-old man's health and ability to endure the terrific strain of office must remain a matter of anxiety for Britain and her colleagues.

Thus far, while he has given the British plenty of headaches, the hero of Verdun has been the bulwark which has stood between the Germans and their efforts to secure far-reaching concessions. These have included bases in the French colonies from which to operate against the allies, and use of the French navy.

The old soldier has shown the same loyalty to his country's interests and the same determination which he displayed when he led his troops to victory against the Germans at Verdun with the immortal cry: "They shall not pass."

But the battle which he has been fighting as chief of state is even more formidable than that at Verdun, and there have been signs at times that he was fighting pretty much alone on some of the great issues.

He forced former Vice Premier Laval out of his cabinet and since then Hitler's pressed steadily for Laval's reinstatement, figuring that this would mean more concessions to Germany. The present vice-premier, Admiral Darlan, who reputedly has no love for England, also appears to favor larger cooperation with the nazis and now is in Paris negotiating with them. Whether he would go so far as to permit Hitler to use the French colonies as a basis is a matter of speculation.

Petaine, while bitter against the British for such incidents as the naval attack on Dakar, has steadfastly refused to do more than defend his position and has stood against any offensive war against the allies. In this he has had the loyal support of General Weygand, whom the marshal made commander-in-chief of the French colonial forces with headquarters in Africa.

In the present crisis it is of the utmost import that Weygand's loyalty goes to Petaine rather than to the Vichy cabinet.

DAIRY MANAGER TO GO TO TULELAKE

Glenn J. Roselle, for the past 10 years manager of Raymond Dairy here, has resigned his position with that firm and will enter business for himself May 15 in Tulelake. Roselle will enter the fountain, lunch and retail drug sundries field.

E. M. Raymond, present owner, will arrive here from Wenatchee, Wash., to take over the local office.

Roselle was offered a transfer to the Wenatchee plant but refused to leave the Klamath basin due to his regard for this part of the country and his many friends here.

The Roselle family will leave for Tulelake this week to reside permanently.
