

List Gives Names Of Eighth Grade Grads of County

Klamath county school offices Thursday made public the names of eighth grade graduates of the county's schools for this year.

School officials pointed out that the list is not complete because it does not include Keno, Malin, Merrill, Gilchrist, Henley or Chiloquin. The "six-six" plan is used in these schools and they do not give diplomas to eighth graders.

Altamont junior high school, Fairhaven and Algona are giving diplomas because those students will attend Klamath union high school.

Here is the eighth grade list:

Purification of Important Well Described by County Sanitarian

By W. B. DAVIS, Sanitarian

In an effort to acquaint the public with some of the work the sanitarian does in the county, the following incident is cited as an example of work to protect and purify private water supplies.

At the Ellingson mill on the Klamath river, there are two wells, while at the Klamath river store, owned and operated by Everett Hotchkiss, there is another well. This fact is of no particular interest to the public, but it is very important to the people residing at the settlement when one considers the fact that the two wells belonging to the mill go dry during the summer, and the well belonging to the store was polluted and unfit for drinking. It seems ironic that the one well that had water the year round should be unfit for drinking. As a result, water had to be hauled in from other sources.

It is obvious that there was nothing that the sanitarian could do about the dry wells, but there might be something that could be done to render the other well safe.

On March 18, 1940, the well was tested and the water was found to be polluted. The bacterial count was 200/cc. Over 10 per cent gas was formed in five tubes of lactose broth in 24 hours.

The rapid gas production from lactose indicates the presence of the coli-aerogenes group. The organisms of the coli-aerogenes group are found normally in the discharges from the intestinal tract of man, animals, or birds. Their presence in water, therefore, must be considered as evidence of pollution.

At the time of this test, the well was uncovered. Animals and birds had access to the well. Surface water undoubtedly ran into it. It was recommended that the well be covered so as to keep all small animals away. This was eventually done. A shed with a tight floor was built over the well. A ditch was constructed around the upper side of the well so that surface water would be led away from it.

On March 3, 1941, after the completion of the improvements, another sample was taken. The water at this time was suspicious, although it was not polluted as badly as before. The bacterial count was 131/cc. There was no gas formed in 24 hours. However, two tubes had 10 per cent gas in 48 hours.

The well was immediately cleaned out as much as possible. The amount of water in the well was calculated and about one cup of Chlorox or Purex solution was put into it. The chlorine solution was permitted to remain for 8 or 10 hours, at that time the pump was started and the storage tank filled with the treated water. The water was left in the storage tank overnight and then drawn off through the faucets in the house so that the treated water would also sterilize the pipe. The well was then pumped until all taste and odor of the chlorine was gone. During the pumping, the water went to the tank and from there to the faucets, thus giving the entire system a complete flushing.

On March 13, 1941 another sample was taken to see what results had been obtained. The water was given a grade A rating. The bacterial count was 111/cc. There was no gas formed in 48 hours.

Since that time a close check has been maintained. A sample was taken on March 20, and again on April 25. Both times the water was safe for drinking purposes.

Five field visits were made to the Klamath river store. A total of 180 miles were traveled, and a safe supply of water is available the year around.

EMERGENCY HAIRCUT
SEATTLE (AP)—Mrs. Wilhelmina Butterworth's haircut may not be stylish, but it was timely.

Her hair, cut in a long bob, became entangled in the washing machine wringer. Relatives, unable to release her, called the fire department.

Fire Lieut. Floyd Wylie decided there was only one solution. He borrowed a pair of shears and clipped the tresses.

HIGH SCHOOL

News Notes and Comment
By June Michelson

And a good time was had by all at the Parents and Patrons senior banquet Wednesday night. There was community singing, special musical numbers, a quiz program and what everyone came for—the dinner.

Jack Cleek, senior class president, acted as master of ceremonies. Jack read the class history and introduced the class officers for each of the four years.

Suzanne Michelson, senior class vice president, read the last will and testament of the class of '41. During the dinner, Bill Sehorn entertained with several western numbers and the senior chorus—3 boys, 13 girls and Director "T-Bone" Fredrickson—presented two numbers, "Children's Prayer" and "Three Blind Mice."

A battle of the sexes was held with five girls and five boys participating. The females came out on top per capita but Benjie Kerns won the entire jackpot for being the "brain" of the bunch. Johnny Foster and Jack Castleberry led the contest.

Carter Sparks, class song leader, led the community singing and Mitty Lehto, yell leader, led the group in a yell for the mothers.

A special vote of thanks is due the Parents and Patrons club and the mothers who worked so hard to make the affair a success.

Looking over the political situation, Frank Ganong seems to have the most support from the student body. Frankie's managers have distributed cards, handbills and pins by the box loads.

Keith Howell, present junior class proxy, got the first posters up and spent the day Wednesday distributing two cartons of candy bars.

Bill King's campaign had not begun in earnest Wednesday. When Eugene Love declined in favor of Ganong, a multitude of students switched with Love.

From back here it looks like a landslide for Ganong.

Gloria Petersteiner has been elected vice president of Pep Peppers for next year; Louise Howe is the new secretary, and Audrey Reed, treasurer.

Doris Weinberg and Merlon Albrecht are the two candidates for president and the results of the voting Wednesday will not be announced until the Pep Pepper banquet scheduled for Wednesday evening, May 21.

As a special feature, Herb Cochran's orchestra will play throughout the banquet.

A deep silence falls over the crowd, all heads are bowed—yep, it's El Rodeo signing time again.

And confidentially, there should be a special badge or medal issued to any student who doesn't sign his own book more than two or three times. Almost everyone has written words to this effect in his own book several times: Gee, kid, I don't know you very well, but you're swell.

And almost anything can be seen in the books from "Oh, you beautiful doll," in the football player's annual to "I'll see

All library books must be returned to the library and all fines paid before students may take their final exams. Books are due by Friday of this week.

STUDENTS GET YEARBOOK OF KUHS FOR 1941

The theme of fall, winter, and spring is used in the 1941 issue of El Rodeo, official yearbook of Klamath Union high school, which was distributed to high school students and sponsors Thursday.

A buff leather cover, with brilliant blue lettering covers the annual which has an unusual feature inasmuch as highly colored pages separate the various divisions in the book. Editor of El Rodeo was Helen Cox, and business manager was Bill Sehorn. To both these students goes a great amount of credit as the book is an exceptionally worthy issue.

El Rodeo is dedicated this year—"To the usually forgotten man—the business man of Klamath Falls, whose generous contributions and sincere interests have for many years made possible not only the publication of our student group activities—this 1941 El Rodeo is appreciatively dedicated."
