TWO SPRAGUE RIVER MILLS EYED BY AFL

The Lumber and Sawmill Workers union (AFL) this week will make demands for union recognition in the two Sprague River lumber firms, Organizer Joe Boyd said Tuesday.

The union is prepared to prove their claim to a majority at both the Crater Lake Box and Lumber company and the Hoesley Logging company, Boyd stated.

Employees of both firms have been working under an agreement recognizing the Industrial Employees union as their bargaining agent until last week when IEU headquarters announced the disbanding of their organization throughout the entire northwest. At the time of disbandment IEU members were urged to join the AFL.

Meanwhile in three other former IEU mills the AFL was claiming a majority and placing charters. The three, all in the Rogue River valley, were the Medford corporation, employing approximately 400 men; the Ingram Lumber company at Gledale, Ore., and the Timber Products company of Medford.

Delegates from the three mill groups will attend a meeting of the Klamath District council here next Sunday, Boyd said.
