ANOTHER BRITISH TRUST.

"The Tariff is the mother of trusts." The Democratic papers all over the land are thoroughly enjoying themselves by reiterating over and over this declaration of Mr. Havemeyer, the sugar king. They tell us that the way to get rid of trusts is to get rid of our Protective policy; that if it wasn't for the Tariff there would be no trusts.

While some of these newspapers were giving this kind of argument to their readers last week they printed at the same time a dispatch from London which told of the formation of a new trust there. This time it is to be a combination of the leading oil seed crushing firms of Great Britain, with a capital of more than $12,000,000. There is no Tariff in England to give birth to this trust. There is nothing over there but plain Free-Trade, and yet here is the trust going into business to control the market in its particular line.

Of course all persons who know anything about the conditions on the other side of the Atlantic recognize that trusts and combinations have existed and are continually forming in England. But a little fact like that doesn't have any weight whatever with partisans who, seizing upon the Havemeyer cry, will continue to defy the truth and to tell us that without Protection trusts cannot thrive.—Philadelphia "Inquirer."

PRODUCE A REMEDY.

As to the political responsibility for trusts there is none. Trusts are no more Republican or Democratic than are ordinary business combinations on a small scale. Their friends and enemies, their beneficiaries and victims, are in all parties, and they thrive in England and Germany as well as in America. In the Eastern rural districts, where the heaviest Republican vote exists, the warfare upon trusts is waged with more vigor than is evidenced in Democratic cities, where the bulk of the laboring population is in some way dependent on industrial pursuits. Produce a remedy for the evil and the Republican party will be as quick to take it up and press it as any other. Nor will it be less assiduous in search of a remedy. With things in this position how is it possible to draw campaign lines? People who are agreed cannot divide and fight; when two parties are equally solicitous to "smash the trusts" how is one, unless it presents a remedy which the other rejects, going to profit by the issue?

The great trouble is that no one has a remedy. The Federal law is necessarily limited in its application; the State laws have uniformly failed. Has the Democracy anything new to suggest? If it is not its slogan of "smash the trusts" will be as meaningless and inconsequential as one to wipe out the grip or abolish the measles.—San Francisco "Chronicle."

Free-trade as a remedy for trusts is like cutting off a man's head to cure the toothache.

Since Havemeyer says the tariff is the mother of trusts, his disposition to leave the latter on the G. O. P.'s doorstep is quite natural.

The Dingley law has yielded a larger revenue than was expected, and that is where it differs from that horrible failure and nondescript, the Wilson law.

Elihu Root has been appointed secretary of war to supplant the late Enalmed Beef Alger. We had an idea that Elihu would get there sooner or later.

The wages of the miners in British Columbia have been reduced from $3.50 to $3.00. There is nothing going on like that in this country, and will not be as long as republicanism and protection rule.

Herr Suchsland, a German scientist, has discovered that the aroma of tobacco is due to microbes, and it is said that he will patent, if he can, a process for making cheap cigars smell like expensive ones.

There is no tariff on rubber. We do not raise a pound of it, and it all comes into this country free of duty. Yet the rubber trust is one of the biggest in the country. Will some one, who explains protection is the cause of trusts, say to us who is the mother of this gigantic trust?

Some people are extremely sensitive to anything that may appear in a local paper that may be construed as detrimental to or disparaging of the locality. A paper to a great extent is the product of the people generally. Liberal patronage not only enable it to be better but encourages it to its best, while the reverse renders it careless of the locality and its interests, and indifferent to opinion in regard to it.

The growth of trusts arouses apprehension of the future, but the facts go to show that the evil effects of trusts upon business are apprehended rather than real at the present time. With all parties alert to find a way to avert trust evils and with no party able definitely to define and locate such evils or to demonstrate that these organizations will not be obliged to succumb to the natural laws of trade, why may not the country avail itself of its unparalleled season of prosperity and breathe easily for a few moments anyway?

An "Out-of-the-Way" County.

A resident of Klamath county very properly sets out in a communication from Klamath Falls, published in The Oregonian, July 29, the advantages and resources of that portion of the state. Remote from regular lines of travel, this section and some others that offer unequalled opportunities to settlement and industry, bears the same relation, or holds the same position toward those portions of the state that are in touch with the outside world through commercial agencies that the entire interior of the Pacific Northwest bore so many years to Eastern and coast centers of trade. They have, so to speak, their good things all to themselves, and enjoy them with a quiet satisfaction that is begotten of plenty and contentment, even while they chafe at time at their seclusion and long to let the outside world know how well off they are and what grand opportunities exist for a multitude of others, who, if they but knew it, could come in and share their prosperity.

A great many residents of our own state even regard the Klamath region as a vast stock range, encompassed by the seclusion which that term implies—a place memorable in the annals of the state for the Modoc massacres and the fortunes that sturdy stockmen, defying isolation, have made there during many successive years. These will be surprised, therefore, at the statement that Klamath wheat took the prize at the world's fair; that Klamath potatoes are the best in the state; that the staple fruits are produced in excellent quality, that wild berries of the most delicious flavor run riot in Klamath hills and marshes, and that forests of fine fir, pine, cedar and tamarack abound. Visions of vast sage plains and foothills tenanted only by stock, covered with waving bunchgrass, fade before this showing, or are rounded out into a variety that is at once pleasing to the imagination and suggestive of prosperity, real and possible, in a material sense. Not only so, but the suggestion of isolation that belongs to out-of-the-way places (speaking from the railroad standpoint) gives way before the facts presented in regard to the educational facilities and social life of Klamath county. These, it appears, are not inferior to those of any other rural community in the state, or, for that matter, in the great West.

A large number of people—journalists, teachers and business men—from sections east of the Rocky mountains—have lately traversed all portions of the state easily accessible by rail. These tourists have expressed themselves surprised and delighted at the vast expanse of area, the beautiful landscape and the seemingly boundless resources of the regions traversed. Speaking for the "out-of-the-way" counties of South-eastern Oregon, it may be said that they duplicate in all of these things the sections traversed by the railroads in the eastern and southern sections of the state, offering the same abounding opportunities to the settler and room and welcome for a multitude of thrifty, industrious people. In the language of the correspondent to whom reference is made, "It should be apparent to all intelligent homeseekers that such a region is not a bad place to go to."—Oregonian.

Crop Report.

The wheat crop continues in excellent condition, especially the fall sown, which has filled well and is of a good quality. In some sections reports as to the condition of spring grain are not as promising as they were. The warm weather and lack of rain have prevented filling to some extent, and the outlook is not encouraging. The damage appears to be confined principally to that sown on summer fallow. There are a few minor reports of rust. Oats are in excellent condition, but need more rain. Harvesting has commenced and much of the fall-sown wheat is in the shock. Some threshing has been carried on during the week in southern Oregon. Haying is practically over, and the most flattering reports are received regarding the excellent and abundant crop secured. The second crop of clover and alfalfa is being cut.

Hops are in bloom and the vines are in a healthy condition. Spraying was continued during the week in all of the yards, which, aided by the high temperatures, practically destroyed the lice. The hot weather has been favorable to the growth of corn.

Potatoes are in blossom, but need more rain. Indications point to a short crop. Gardens have made good growth; rain is badly needed.

There is no change in the fruit prospects. Reports received from Benton county state that there will be plenty of apples and pears for local use, but none for shipment; the estimate is placed at about 20 per cent. of full crop. Apples are dropping in sections of Washington county. Peaches are ripe and in market in the southern counties. Cherry picking is over. Blackberries continue to ripen; indications point to a short crop.

The large onion crop of Washington county promises well. Pastures are drying up. Stock is in fair condition.

A. B. WOLLABER, Portland, Or.

It is gratifying to note the fact that sturdy men of means are coming into the Northwest and buying farms and paying for them. In a short time the "arid lands of the desert" will be reclaimed by irrigation, and that which seemed a desolate waste will prove an oasis and produce rich cereals and luscious fruits. Oregon is the best state in the Union, it can support ten times the number of people here. It is a veritable paradise. It needs more people and the people are coming rapidly and the Republics cheerfully spreads the glad tidings of great joy.
