THE TRUST PROBLEM.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican recently said of the trust problem: "We must compel the trusts to work in the open and without any protection against the free play of competitive forces other than is afforded by their asserted ability to manufacture more cheaply than smaller capitals can manufacture. Then if they live they deserve to live, and we should only be impairing the power of society in the production of wealth by destroying them. An if they do not thus rest on an honest economic basis, they will speedily fall under the conditions imposed by adequate regulative measures." This is an excellent statement of what The Oregonian has always held on the subject of trusts.

The Indians of the United States are not decreasing, but increasing, in numbers, and he is confident that the returns for 1900 will show a considerable gain over those for 1890, when the Indian population of the United States, not including Alaska, was 249,273. It is doubted by those who have made special study of the subject whether the Indian population of the present territory of the United States, at the time of the discovery by Columbus, was as much as 500,000, and many judicious inquirers have doubted whether it much exceeded 300,000. The Indians subsisted chiefly upon game and fish, and their numbers were limited to the opportunities that such substances afforded. Large families were uncommon, and the mortality among the children was great. It is believed by some that the number of Indians in the United States will yet be increased much beyond the numbers that were here when the Europeans came. Better clothing and shelter, surer food supply, improvement in cleanliness, gradual relief of women from drudgery, and less promiscuity in sexual relations are factors of first importance in preservation and increasing of the race.

Sam Jones, the eccentric southern preacher, sometimes meddles in politics, and has written for the Atlanta Journal concerning his late trip to Oregon, as follows: "I find in my tour that there is but little agitation of the silver question." "The 10-to-1 silver business won't cut much ice in the next national combat at the polls." "The democrats can be counted on to act the fool just at the right time to help satisfy the republicans and hurt themselves." "The pope are sullen, and, like Bre'r Rabbit, ain't saying much, and the democrats can't count much on them." "If Chairman Jones will resign, and Algeid will die, and Bryan will talk less, there is a fighting chance for the democrats in 1900."

Robt. Hunsaker returned last Friday from Mcford with 5000 pounds of salt, for L. F. Willis.

Miss Addie Lindsay, came up from Shovel Creek last Thursday morning, to visit her father at this place, and returned in the evening for Gazette, Calif.

Jas. Moore, the freighter, arrived in the Falls Friday from Ager with three wagon loads of freight for the Falls merchants.

Wm. Robinson, of Bly, arrived in the city last Friday on business. Mr. Robinson says there has not been any cattle sales in his section yet to amount to anything.

L. B. Applegate last Friday delivered 100 head of cows to J. C. Mitchell. The cattle were weighed at the Mitchell ranch, two miles east of town. They were driven to the railroad Sunday morning.
