WANTS A BIG LOT OF SHEEP.

Wyoming Stockmen in Quest of 25,000 Head.

J. I. Carson, manager of the Pardee Livestock Association, of Rawlins, Wyo. is in Portland, with a view to the purchase of 25,000 head of sheep from Oregon stockmen. He drove 15,000 head of wethers "over the trail" last spring, and successfully delivered them on the ranges of Wyoming. Two trainloads of sheep were taken at one time from Heppner, and these were debarked at Huntington, the terminus of the O. R. & N., and from there the stock was driven across the Snake river valley, subsisting on the grasses found along the trail as they went eastward. Should he succeed in purchasing all he desires this fall, he will ship clear through by rail, as the ship grass has been pretty well cleaned out along the trails, and snow storms would be likely to impede the progress of the stock as winter approaches.

Mr. Carson says, however, that he will not purchase this fall unless the prices suit him. He finds that the Oregon sheep ranges are now pretty well supplied with fresh green grass, as a result of the August rains, and sheepraisers may feel like wintering the stock themselves. In that case he will defer his purchases until spring.—Oregonian.

Swares—Hart Nuptials.

Last Saturday at high twelve, Mr. Frank Swares and Miss Sissy Hart were joined in holy wedlock at Klamath agency by the United States Interior Department intact. Shortly before noon the free bell of the big boarding school tolled the approaching hour when the wedding party, consisting of the many tillucous and intimate friends of the bride and groom, proceeded from the commissary building headed by a big fat policeman, to the chapel of the school building, elaborately decorated with pine boughs, varves berries and choke cherries which presented a very pleasing effect. The party entered the building and ascended the stairs with steps measured by a persistent little school boy who beat time on a tenor drum, and entered the chapel. The contracting garters took their seats just inside the door among the antediluvian aborigines. A moment later the organ pealed forth one of Lohengrin's grand wedding marches and the couple, accompanied by two maids of honor, marched up the aisle to the altar where the word was spoken which made two hearts beat as one.

Mr. Swares is an alien who hails from Portugal and is an industrious, hard-working, young man of no ordinary ability with a buck saw. His pretty and accomplished bride is a daughter of Jim Hart of Spring creek fame, on the reservation, and her many kind acts during her stay in town have won her numerous compliments.

A large fire is raging near Aspen lake, and has burned several hundred acres of fine timber land in the past week. The valley around town, which up to a few days ago was free from smoke, is now so heavy with it that the surrounding mountains are hidden from view. This fire now has gained such a headway that nothing but a heavy rain could check it.

FORT KLAMATH

An Epitome of Interesting Occurrences in That Section.

Fort Klamath, Oregon Sept. 12, 1899.

ED. REPUBLICAN.—Not having seen any items of interest in your paper from this section of the country for some time, I thought I would trim a quill and plunge headlong into the fluid extract of ink to subserve the interest of your many readers in this section.

Although the inclemency of the weather has interfered somewhat with threshing, haying is about over and fall scrape are the order of the weekly routine work. During the last three weeks we have enjoyed considerable sport, in which time two fights and a bluffing contest took place. The first fight was between two innocent looking grafters who fought two rounds in two days. In the second round, however, the younger of the contestants had his ribs tickled with a sharp instrument made, we understand, expressly for the purpose. No serious damage was done.

The next contest seemed to turn out all over a hundred and sixty acre field. A couple of our christian haymakers, after a few uncomplimentary remarks, entered the field with pitchfork and gun, one after the other, until the one with the gun got in the lead when Mr. Pitchfork chased Mr. Gun over several winrows and around the field several times until his forship gave out. The matter, Dame Rumor says, has been arbitrated and settled.

The last scrap, however, was truly an interesting one in which three of our worthy citizens participated. It seems to have started over a couple of dogs, when one called the other a liar during their dispute. As a result the big glass front of the store building of Shive & Ryan is badly punctured. While this punctation was going on a brother of the gentleman who hurled the uncomplimentary remark rushed to the scene of destruction and demanded vengeance for the brutal treatment of his brother. Sorry to say it, but vengeance was dealt out in a very forcible manner by the other man who straightened out his right arm on his assailant who almost hit the moon, and when he returned from his aerial flight he was all out of chewing tobacco. Since then our people have become more religiously inclined and are careful of the remarks that escape their lips.

Olney G. Hopwood of company B, 2nd Oregon, is sojourning with us. Mr. Hopwood is a gentlemanly young hero and an interesting conversationalist.

The indicator on the matrimonial dial points to a wedding up here in the near future.

A great many of us have visited Crater lake and the huckleberry patch this summer on our annual outing. Your correspondent last week visited Crater lake and the berry patch for the first time. Our trip to the lake was an uneventful one of which I will tell you here to print it. It is rather up hill business to write for a paper, but the up-hilliest of all is to climb the mountainous mountains to see these wonderful places. One has to either ride or walk up the mountain, as balloon accommodations are not to be had up here. Well, after a hard day's ride from Fort Klamath we reached the lake and found it occupying the same spot in the mountain it always had. After gazing on it tranquilly waters for a couple of hours and climbing around over the broken furniture which surrounded it in chaotic disorder, we left the lake where we had found it and went back to camp at the foot of Mt. Mazama where we stayed that night. When the sun had risen sufficiently next morning to illuminate the distorted country in that section, we struck our tents and hiked out for the berry patch to do business with the berries which seem to have stolen bushes from the native redskins who were much in evidence in that section. Our first introduction to the "patch" was to pack up the mountain which seemed to be sky high. In fact when one gets on top of Huckleberry mountain whether he takes the balloon route or packs up, he can look across the wide expanse to the west and almost see the smoke on the firing line on the Philippine islands.

Two or three times we were above the clouds, and on Saturday when we descended the mountain we found it raining one of those gentle Oregon mists which occasionally reach out in this section from the Willamette valley. During the night it kept up raining so we laid in our tents next day, which was Sunday. The elements seem to observe the Sabbath and gave us a temporary rest. But immediately after the clock had tolled the hour of twelve that night the big black clouds which had hung around all day opened up for business in a torrenial manner. It was not one of those Oregon mists this time, for it kept up incessantly for twenty-four hours at the rate of seventeen thousand gallons to the square rod per hour and never missed a drop. By Tuesday morning everything in that section of the country was soaked to the hide, even to the weary berry seekers who had been hiding in their tents all this time.

Our party was an industrious lot, so much so that even the bread yeast got to working during the night to make a raise. Next morning the cook forgot to put the requisite amount of soda in the yeast to raise the dough, and as a consequence we all had sour stomachs. On finding out our ailment, I first thought to take a dose of soda to give the bread a lift, but after a second thought it occurred to me that the soda would not only lift the bread, but my stomach also. Such was the course of affairs until nature herself fixed matters and smiled sweetly at my misfortune when we hiked out for home where we arrived a few days later glad that we were still alive, and safely quartered within gunshot range of the historic old Fort Klamath Shinpiasters Again.

We are to have shinpiasters again. It is understood that the treasury will soon issue $10,000,000 of fractional paper currency in denominations of 25 and 50 cents, and perhaps smaller, to meet the large demand, principally from the west. The initiative came from Nebraska, in the shape of a circular addressed to numerous congressmen, asking them to favor a bill embodying a provision for the issue of small paper currency. The suggestion has met with favor in the treasury department, and it is said that in a short time $10,000,000 of this currency will be placed on sale in the various postoffices where the demand is greatest. The main object to be observed is to facilitate the transmission of small amounts of money in letters for the benefit of country people making small mail purchases at a distance. Without some such conveniences, small sums are sent in silver and are easily detected in letters, or a postal order must be purchased, involving unnecessary expense.

Thus endeth the writings. And may the blessings of God be with us all, here and hereafter. Amen. POLLY.

The Asylum Board.

The proposed election of a new superintendent of the insane asylum, says the Salem Statesman of Sept. 2, which was announced at the last meeting of the board, has attracted considerable attention and considerable interest has been manifested, on the part of the people of every portion of the state, in the gentlemen named as candidates for the place. There are four of these, all of them widely and favorably known, as eminent members of their profession and leading exponents of republican principles. They are Dr. J. N. Smith, of Salem; Dr. H. Wright, of Klamath Falls; Dr. John F. Calbreath, of McMinnville and Dr. D. A. Paine, of Eugene, the latter being the present incumbent.

The election was held Tuesday the 5th inst. Dr. John F. Calbreath was the successful candidate, he having the best political pull. Dr. Wright says he has no kick coming. He is proud that he had by far, the best medical endorsement before the board. The other candidates having the best political endorsements, and politics not having been eliminated from such places, he could not expect the position.

Another Good Indian. All that is mortal of the famous Indian Jonah, who murdered policeman Dave Hill a few miles east of Klamath Falls in the Spring of 1892, was laid in its final resting place last Sunday among his good departed relatives and comrades' souls which are now sleeping beneath the moaning pines in the little cemetery a few miles below Klamath agency.

Jonah realized the awfulness of his crime after being sentenced to fifteen years to the state penitentiary where he served out nearly half of his sentence when he was over taken by the grim visage of death and passed to the happy hunting grounds on August 20, last. His body was sealed in a metal casket by the request of his relatives, who defrayed all expenses, and had it shipped to the reservation for interment. On its arrival at the Agency the state seal of the casket was broken and the body, which was in a state of mortification, taken forth and redressed and placed in a $125 coffin. A large cortege followed the remains to its last resting place among whom were R. S. Moore and Geo. T. Baldwin, of Klamath Falls, the former acting as chief mourner. So well did Rufus act his part on this occasion that his pathos moved the whole procession in a transport of tears and sighs for the bereaved relatives and friends, while Geo. with his camera, made a lasting impression of the many tear stained faces which he has preserved for future reference.
