He is now at the convention, where he has been selected to represent Oregon on the committee on rules and regulations.
Lakeview Examiner: Doubtless the big fires in the mountains west from Lakeview will cause immense damage to the timber in that section. It seems desirable to prevent these forest fires as they are of annual occurrence. Sometimes they are started accidentally, but more frequently they are set purposely.
The divorce proceeding of Ella Childers vs. W. A. Childers was tried in the circuit court last Saturday. No decision has as yet been rendered, the case having been taken under advisement. At the conclusion of such trial, court adjourned until next Tuesday, when the injunction suit of Ringe vs. Chapman will receive attention.
The annual Clatsopiana will be in progress at Ashland next month and the attendance promises to be largely in excess of that of any previous year. Speakers and musicians of national reputation have been secured and the program as a whole will be more attractive than any yet given. Time devoted to such gatherings cannot be more profitably or profitably spent.
With the increase of business in these columns, we will next week be compelled to re-estimate our supplies in order to furnish our readers an adequate allowance of literary proceeds. We are conscious that the allowances are hardly sufficient at present. But this rush of business promises to grow, and we are glad to be able to expand our capacity to accommodate everything literary and financial with emphasis on the latter. Coming on the heels of political defeat and war, this imporing of business from all quarters leads us to shake hands with ourselves in congratulation over the considerable favor of late, which on or about June 4th, might have seemed wrathful and perditional.
Ashland Tidings: Blain Ben and Gordon Miller, Indians of the Klamath reservation, were arraigned in the United States court at Portland, Thursday, each charged with stealing a horse saddle and bridle from the reservation. They pleaded guilty and were each fined $200. They asserted that they only borrowed the horses, etc., to ride over the line into Northern California, and that one of the horses was an stray, or a horse which had been sold and had come back to its original owner. One of the horses was recovered, and the other had been sold, but the price was refunded to the owner. The prisoners had, moreover, been held in the chain-gang by the reservation police for five weeks, and they were of the opinion that they had been punished enough for their escapade. The court was of a different opinion, and fined them $200 each, and as they are indigent persons, will probably, after serving 30 days' longer in jail, take the penitentiary oath and go on their way rejoicing.
